

Harmony time Gatherings

As the next harmony time this year starts on 22nd September (the day before the equinox – as always) and I would like to initially draw the attention of my UK audience to a couple of events. The first is in Dorset, the other in Wiltshire.

I know many others will be taking place and I really wished the Sacred network would be up and running by now to help highlight what is going on everywhere. Completion is only a few weeks away now. (More about this in the Other section)

The event that I am looking forward to attending myself is at Knowlton Church Sacred Henge, Wimborne, Dorset – Thursday 22nd Sept 12pm noon till around 1.15 pm and maybe a little later. There is an optional Tibetan healing bowl session afterwards.

Further details on this event can be found in the 'Other' section – including a very necessary car parking booking system at the next door farm. It is necessary to book as there is room for only 200 cars and over 100 car parking spaces have already been snapped up.

The second event is a Shine Seminar Event (Thank you Eli). It will be a few days later on Sunday 25th September at Oliver's castle in Wiltshire. It starts at 11.11am. (The harmony time is expected to be around 20 days this time – so meditation at sacred sites with symmetrical nodes can be done more effectively any time during then). Parking is much easier at this site and it can easily accommodate 200 cars.

Introduction

Having promoted these two events, thank you again, for taking the time to read this newsletter and my apologies again that it has grown to the size you find it.

I really do try and leave some subjects out so I don't take up too much of your time and I am hoping all that remains is something you consider a valuable enough investment of your time.

I do have to say that much of this information comes from other people's hard work. This is written about again though as I believe it really ought to be better known because of what is going on in this World right now and also what is very likely to happen in our near term future.

In presenting you with this information, I try to be mindful of everyone's journey. I therefore try and rely on synchronicity in regards to what is covered and then just look to present it in a readable and understandable way.

Please do share this newsletter with anyone who you think might be interested in reading it. All my newsletters are also always found on my website www.roryduff.com in case you would like to read earlier ones.

Suggested background music

When reading through this newsletter, I sometimes like to listen to some music and this time the thought came me to listen to the great Russian composer Rimsky-Korsakov and his symphony Scherazade.

In listening to it, I began to appreciate just how closely it was matching the theme of this newsletter and also how the World seems to be being wrecked right now by just a few unscrupulous, selfish, greedy people.

Rimsky-Korsakov got his inspiration for this piece of music from reading the stories of the Arabian nights and the voyages of Sinbad the sailor. Having been in the navy himself for a few years, you can perhaps sense the ocean, the storms and even the shipwrecks that Sinbad endured when you listen to this music.

The 1001 stories of the Arabian nights was a fantasy and I particularly liked this idea too because it fitted the theme that darkness might not actually exist, instead it is all just in the perception of our mind – a fantasy.

In this ancient Persian tale, Scherazade is telling these stories to the Sultan. To avoid being killed every morning she tells him the end of the story that she began the night before and she then starts a new one before he goes to sleep. The Sultan's curiosity in wanting to know the ending of each new tale stops him from killing her in the morning.

By the time she finishes telling him all the stories, the Sultan has fallen in love with her and doesn't want her killed at all.

This 'happy ending' is mirrored at the very end of Rimski-Korsakov's music with the playing of one long continuous note being played on the violin. This is the note E and it is also one of the highest possible notes that can be played on that instrument.

In this recording the orchestra plays both lightly and occasionally during the playing of this last note. In others, we just hear a longer duration of that one note.

That love begins at the very end of this story, one with challenging ocean going adventures, now seems very akin to humanity's own collective journey through life right now and what we still have ahead of us for just a little longer.

Once we too have survived all the chaos and destruction we are being subjected to, we too will be able to experience a greater intensity of love.

If you choose to listen to this music as you read this newsletter, you might also sense these trials and this final tribulation.

As the music ends on this single high note – think now of the all year harmony time that will be beginning in December 2024.

That too will be one single frequency emanating from our inner core. This too is most likely to be the beginning of the building of universal love in our World.

Space

As to why there are two images of deep space at the start of this newsletter will be explained shortly. Why they look so different will also be covered.

The theme as hinted at earlier is to do with light, however it is also about prophecy and the need to be able to foretell certain colours of light.

This has also fortuitously led to a slightly fuller understanding of just how our evolution of consciousness is going to occur.

Unfortunately many 'dependent' scientists still view prophecy as pseudoscience. Despite their protestations though, it has been proved time and time again to be possible.

(If you are unsure of the validity of prophecy, this newsletter will introduce you to a friend of mine who has been scientifically tested and proven to be able to see the future time and time again. He has worked with the intelligence agencies for over 20 years. Knowing that we can accurately foretell what will happen a few days into the future, and how to do this, is a game changer.)

The problem for these 'In denial' scientists, is not with the idea of accurately foretelling the future – their problem is that it does not fit in with their scientific model for how the World works.

Their own financial security depends on their model being continued – in other words it is fear that holds them back and their fear, unfortunately, is also holding all of mankind back.

It is their fear that makes them 'dependent' scientists.

It is quite incredible how their 'state of thinking' differs from those scientists who are 'independent' and free to explore, experiment and to write about their findings without having to 'tow a line', support a 'narrative' just to get an 'end of month' paycheck.

If a scientific model does not fit with the observations, it must be wrong.

This newsletter will look at future events linked to the galactic current sheet and there is some dispute as to when we started to enter this sheet. Being able to foretell when we pass through certain aspects of this current sheet is going to be extremely important.

If you follow Ben Davidson from the Suspicious Observers channel, he has stated (and he fully admits it is a guess) that we began to enter the sheet at the time of the Carrington event back in 1859. (The Carrington event was the last time the Earth experienced a very large solar flare – it took out the telegraph system at the time)

There is a problem with this date though.

Davidson also talks about a rough time frame of between 150 years to 300 years in regards to how long it will take for our solar system to pass through this sheet. I agree with him that this length of time is uncertain.

The problem though is that in the middle of this current sheet we will pass through the reversal zone where the central plasma changing polarity. We don't know how far into this sheet we will travel until we hit this zone and we don't know how thick this zone is and how long it will take for us to pass through it. What we can expect though is that this zone will cause a sharp electrical disturbance to everything in our solar system. (We know this because the Earth experiences a jolt of electricity every 8 -10 days as we pass through the Sun's current sheet)

When it comes down to when things happen within the Galactic current sheet, we have two advantages over these scientists – the tell-tale signs of the Earth Energies and the power of prophecy.

We have recently had significant increases in cosmic energy and in 2017 we had a widening of the energy lines, three more Emperor Dragons and the harmony time periods started extending. (Cosmic Energy, neutrino's, Inner core transducer connection to ultra-low spherical vibratory standing waves – aka Energy lines)

There is a link here too with the Hopi Indian prophecy and the arrival of the twins and their 7 year prediction of the coming Red star of purification. The date of December 2024 was predicted by the arrival of the type 5 North/South meridians. This 7 year time space matches the time when the harmony period is expected to become an all year round event.

It is therefore predicted that after a seven-year transitional period, in December 2024 we pass fully into the current sheet. (This, to me, seems far more plausible than the guess of 1859.)

Right now we are just in a 7 year transition as we pass through the edge of a 200 +/- 50 years wide current sheet and this is why we are getting increasing amounts of cosmic energy and why our magnetic field is reducing in strength.

If Ben Davidson is right about 1859 though, we would be over 150 years into the current sheet. What seems wrong about that is that we really ought to have hit the central reversal zone in the middle by now.

If anything dramatic is going to happen to our Sun and ourselves, it will be when our solar system hits this reversal zone. So for me, it seems unlikely that we entered the current sheet back in 1859.

If, however, we fully enter the current sheet in 2024, we will likely have at least around 30-50 years before we hit its reversal zone – the width of which we will still be unsure of.

We have time on our side

In the last few years, nothing about how things are progressing energetically suggests we are behind schedule in our preparations for personal transformations and an evolution of consciousness.

Yes we have entered a very difficult phase for humanity and I touch on this in the 'Other' section of the newsletter. But, in terms of our own personal learning and development in this increasing energetic environment, we are being taken on a slow gradual journey that the majority of us will be able to cope with. If we were to be immersed into this rapidly, it would probably fry our minds and turn us all mad. The universal mind would not be that daft and humanity will have survived this before.

There are unfortunately people who are definitely suffering because of these energetic changes and it is here that we will have to step up and help these people. The first way we can do this is to help explain to them, as best we can, just what is going on and how to turn it into an opportunity.

It is this that drives me. We must learn, develop and share what we are finding in order to more effectively help others to also grow and do the same. I know we won't be able to help everyone – but we must try to help as many as possible.

One of the ways we must do this is that we too must become prophets.

It is easier than you think.

In the Science section in this newsletter we will look at what we can learn from the changing colour of our Sun. Foreseeing these changing colours is one of the tasks we have ahead of us.

The reason for this is that we will be given advance information for when the colour of our Sun changes and that will give us time to take the appropriate actions.

Before we get to that though, I want to tell you about the other areas this newsletter will cover.

In the Earth energies section we take a look at what may have happened at the Avebury stone circle complex in the past by looking at possible past and present energetic configurations of the energy lines day. This was talked about at a dowsing day that I held there recently. I also want to highlight some exciting energetic investigations being done in Czechia. What dowsing leads us to discover can be truly extraordinary.

In the Books section I take a look at why it is so beneficial to read some 'key' books twice after gaps of several years. I refer to a recent book I have read again which brought through a greater understanding that I had missed picking up the first time. The only reason was that it was down to how much I have learnt and experienced between now and when I originally read the book. The question on your mind might well be if any book you once read is nagging away at you to be read again. If so, I really suggest you do.

In the Media Section we take a look at some sensational new images of space and the dawn of a new era of scientific understanding in a video I highly recommend you watch. It presents a view that greatly supports the understanding of what is written about in the Science section and it clearly highlights the serious flaws the mainstream, 'dependent' scientists are making.

In the Other section I have provided what I hope is the last update to the Sacred Network progress before a go live date later in September. I also write about why it is important to know the reality that is going on in the World right now so we can be better prepared for what is going to be a very bumpy year ahead. It is looking like it will begin to start becoming much more evident this October. It may not make pleasant reading but hopefully it will help you help others to make sense of what is going on. The reason for presenting this to you is so you can consider it without it bringing on any negativity. This will enable you to perhaps more easily go with the flow and not get buffeted around so much by all the false information all the Western Governments will be throwing at us via their media of lies.

In the last week of August, two different gentlemen (thank you Will and Tom) shared information with me about the subjects and theme of this newsletter. They had no idea of the theme of this newsletter though. This sort of thing just shows me how much synergy, telepathy and empathy is beginning to emerge between us all.

I suspect this will become more and more common and something we will all soon experience much more. We must look for these positive signs of change in these troubling times.

The following information on Goethe's thoughts on colour came from Will.

Johan Wolfgang von Goethe, writer and philosopher, believed that there were only two pure colours – Blue and Yellow. Blue was where darkness was weakened by light and Yellow where light was weakened by darkness.

Science later thought that they had proved Goethe wrong and, in a way, they were right, but only when it came to the 'Actual' colour of light.

What it seems Goethe was more interested in, was 'our perception' of light.

He called our observation of light the 'discipline of discernment'. It was a theory of light that has been said to be rooted in morphology (Morphology being the study of the shape and form of something).

We know that Goethe spent many hours studying plants and the 'spirit' within them. It was something he later called 'Die Urpflanze'. This was said to be a certain something that was somehow embedded within a plant. The description does not help that much and it is almost impossible to translate what 'Urpflanze' might mean. However, it is most easily grasped as a concept if we consider it to be something that we might each individually be able to 'perceive' about a plant.

It is this difference between 'the actual' light and 'our perception' of light that must be held in mind as we now take a closer look at light and its positive and potentially detrimental effects on us in the future.

It would appear that Goethe's beliefs about people's 'perception of light' may actually have some validity after all.

The Yellow Sun

I have been hearing several people lately talking about a time in their youth when they remembered the Sun being more yellow than it is today. This is partly supported by the fact that everyone always drew pictures of the Sun back then using a yellow crayon.

Nowadays, aside from Sunrise and Sunset, the Sun seems to be much whiter and even brighter. But is this true?

I ask this because we must consider that what we see is not light itself but our perception of light as it passes through our eyes, hits photoreceptor cells in our retina, where it turns into electrical signals that then pass along the optic nerve to our brain.

On the way it goes through the thalamus which is like a processing station. The information from the thalamus is then directed into different parts of the brain – like the visual cortex and the end result is that these signals turn into something we perceive.

Different wavelengths of light also lead us to perceiving different colours.

This processing of light does not work well for some people and this leads to some colours being perceived as similar. This is called 'colour blindness' and there are several types of this affliction with the red/green being the most common form.

The key learning point here is that our perception of the colour of light is down to how we process the different wavelengths of actual light entering our eyes.

This leads us to two understandings.

1. If the actual wavelength of light changes, we will experience seeing a different perceived colour.
2. However if the wavelength of light stays the same but our perception process changes, we would also give us the impression of seeing a different colour of light.

If we come back to the Sun and us remembering it to be yellow in our youth, we must consider both of these understandings could have occurred.

The 'actual light' from the Sun could have changed - and 'our perception' of that light could also have changed.

In this newsletter, we will see scientific evidence that, previously undetected, light from the Sun has been measured. What will also be covered is something that seems to change our processing of how we perceive light.

We will also look at good reasons why our perceptions have changed and are still being changed too.

This is relevant because one of the Universal prophecies talk about the changing colour of our Sun - from Yellow to White to Red to Black & then to a deep Red.

Scientifically, I think all of these actual colours of light can be now explained with these two previously mentioned understandings and I aim to do this in this newsletter.

In doing this I will also include a look at relevant prophecies as these cyclic long term prophecies are now moving to become short term prophecies.

This means we can all help in the more accurate prediction of when certain solar events cause change our perceived colour of the sun, and when the beneficial and detrimental effects might occur.

As always, we will have to cope with the obfuscation and misdirection thrown at us as part of the false narrative that we have had to endure for the last 50 years (at least) and which has intensified in the last 5 years.

In regards to this, just consider the strong possibility that certain people in the World, people with access to information from secret research laboratories and secret archives held over centuries, might actually know about these cyclic events and what happens in the lead up to them and during them.

It is highly unlikely but we don't need to worry ourselves with that as our newly learnt ways are going to be far more accurate.

Why we can be confident about this will be explained later on.

To begin though, I want to write about an old Toltec story and I will do this in two parts.

Toltec story – 1st part

The Toltecs were a nation that lived in Central America (Mexico, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica & Panama) from about 1000AD to 1200AD. They were there just before the Aztecs who arrived around 1345AD.

This title of the Toltec tale is 'The story of the smoky mirror'.

It is a story that is also said to tell us who we really are.

One of the four Aztec Gods was called Tezcatlipoca (in the Nahuatl language this name translates to mean 'The smoky mirror'). He was associated with the night and also the Jaguar. He is sometimes also depicted with a mirror on his chest.

The story is a short one and it starts in this way.

"One night the God/Smoky Mirror had a dream in a cave deep beneath the Pyramid of the Sun at a place called Teotihuacan. Teotihuacan translates to mean 'The place where the gods were created'.

(The underground chamber there is said, by the Mexican Spiritual teacher don Miguel Ruiz, to be a place where humans can become Gods, a place where the path to divinity and freedom can be found. It is also a place where there is a high concentration of earth energy fields –R.D.)

In this dream the Smoky mirror travelled far up through the great pyramid and far out into the night sky into the World of the stars and shining swirling galaxies.

He looked up and around at the stars and he saw that they were made of light.

He then looked at the space between the stars and he saw that it too was made of light.

The second part of this story is told later on, because we need to first ask the following question here

How could this God see that the space between the stars was made of light? What should we make of this and is this even possibly true? – When we look up at the night sky and into deep space all we seem to see is darkness.

But is this darkness really dark? The phrase in the story gives us a possible clue – darkness is said to be made of light.

The Lost Light of Hubble

One of the two images at the start of the newsletter was taken by the Hubble space telescope. The title given to this image is 'The Lost Light of Hubble'

Researchers at the Instituto de Astrofísica de Canarias, on the island of La Palma in the Spanish Canary islands, spent three years producing this image.

800 exposures (photographs) were taken over the course of 400 orbits around the Earth. This was done September 2003 and January 2004.

They were using a new technique that revealed the lost light around the largest galaxies in what have been called Ultra deep images. Using this technique they were able to pre-process all the images to recover much more light.

The white areas you can see on the image are actually places where the Hubble telescope picked up nothing – They called this 'areas of no return'. That does not mean there was no light, just that they could not detect any.

The coloured areas in the image are where there are the known galaxies.

The black areas around the coloured areas are where they know there is dust and gases

It is the grey areas that have now been called the lost light of Hubble. This is now known to be down to dusty plasma. (Dust and plasma are what we would expect to find in an electric universe)

Since these images were taken and reprocessed, these grey areas were looked at by astronauts on the international space station and they noticed that they had an 'order' to them. These areas were shown to be organised into waves and structures. This could only have occurred as a result of an electric field. (N.B. Organising waves within these grey areas comes up again later on)

If you look again at the image you can begin to see that the grey and the white areas also all seem interconnected – a bit like a network.

With the grey areas, being formed as a result of an electric field, it now means that things are not looking good when it comes to the search for Dark Matter and the continuation of Relativity theory. (More about this in the media section)

Relativity theory strongly relies on finding Dark Matter and over the last few years large numbers of scientists have been hard at work trying to observe this hypothetical dark matter. There have been over 50 scientific papers published by them - all having to explain their failure to find any observations that come close to being called 'Dark matter'.

The two key learning points (KLP) with this image are firstly, that there is lots of dust and dusty plasma in the Universe and this is shielding light from reaching the telescope and from reaching our eyes.

The second KLP is that there are areas where, as of yet, no light has been detected.

Much of the darkness of the night sky is therefore likely to be light – but it is just not getting through to us.

It is beginning to look like the God in the Toltec story might be right when it came to the space between the stars is also light.

We will return to the white areas where no light is detected later but first, we need to fast forward in time to 25 December 2021 to the launch of a new and better space telescope and the observations that now seem to show that we really do live in an Electric universe.

This is critical for us to be able to know and accept when it comes to the solar events spoken about in the prophecies.

The James Webb Space Telescope

This telescope was designed primarily to conduct infrared astronomy. It is now the largest optical telescope in space and its high infrared resolution and sensitivity allow it to view objects that were too faint, or too distant, for the Hubble Space Telescope.

The Hubble telescope mainly sees in optical (visible) and ultraviolet wavelengths, so its "eyes" work differently from the Webb telescope. The latter, with its infrared capability, allows it to look through dusty regions of space that Hubble can't penetrate.

The Webb telescope's mirror is also much bigger than Hubble's and is 100 times more light sensitive.

These are images taken in July 2022 of the 'Cosmic cliffs' in the Carina Nebula. The upper image is from Hubble, the lower one, from the James Webb telescope. The James Webb image shows a slightly wider area of the night sky, but is obviously much clearer.

The James Webb telescope is very new and has only started providing images since Sept 2021. Already it has provided positive proof of electric currents flowing in space on the large scale.

With this proof, it fully supports the theory of our own Galaxy having a Galactic current sheet – something that relativity theorists vehemently resist.

This also means we can accept that this current sheet comes with plasma with positive and negative currents, as well as dust and cosmic energy

Rather than write more about this evidence, there is a video in the media section that provides full detail along with some absolutely stunning images of deep space.

By accepting that we really live in an Electric universe, we can progress to look for something that has been called a special ray of light. This phrase comes from a prophecy that I said we would look into at the beginning of this newsletter.

The Inca Universal Prophecy

The Inca and their ancestors in Peru speak of events in the past called Pachacuti. These were said to be a cyclic events that happened over long periods of time and because of this, and other things they have said, we know it to be connected to the universal prophecies.

The word Pachacuti literally means 'Earth upside down' but it is understood to really describe a time of great physical and mental transformation – a time when the perception of reality is over turned.

It is therefore not literally about our physical Earth overturning.

Although a prophecy, this is telling us that some cyclic event must have some kind of ability to change our perceptions – this would mean changing the inner processing of all our sensory observations – including the inner processing of light which might lead to different perceptions of the colours of light.

In other words, the actual wavelength of light from our Sun may not change at all, but our perception of it may change during this solar event such that we think that the Sun is changing colour.

It also seems that our perceptions may be altered enough to make us think our whole reality has been changed – this could now mean seeing feeling and hearing a whole host of different things.

The changing of the colour of the Sun may not mean much but as a signal for a coming associated solar events – one that could have both potentially beneficial and detrimental effects (like our sanity as we experience a new perception of a totally changed World), it could be very, very important.

These ‘Pachacuti’ events were said to occur at the time of Mastay – a time when a special ray of light was said to come from the Sun and a time when the Gods and our Ancestors would come to this World as this was when the gateways were open. This was also said to be a time there were great gatherings and a reintegration of many people.

If this is true, we are forced to ask three questions.

Firstly, just how could a special ray of light from the Sun overturn our perception of reality - to the extent that we can also perceive Gods and Ancestors?

Secondly, how is that this special light can appear and then disappear over time such that we have not measured it before?

& Thirdly, just what is this special light?

A common misconception

At the outset here, we must throw out one common misconception.

New age Guru’s, success coaches and motivators around the World talk about how we can create our own reality.

They talk as though manifesting anything we want is some kind of magic within our grasp if we follow the right rules.

Whilst goal setting and other techniques can get you what you want in the World, the problem here is one of terminology.

Using the word ‘reality’ causes misconceptions. The idea that we can all create our own reality leads on to people thinking that lots of realities are in existence at the same time. (For the readers who have some knowledge of physics - Please don’t think of the Copenhagen interpretation of the two slit experiment here – there really is a far better interpretation than the absurdities this one that leads people into thinking of multiple realities because of its multiple collapsing wave functions)

It would probably be far more accurate to say that we can create our own future. It is really more about the choices we make in life in regards to creating our own future and not about being able to change the fabric of reality itself.

If we can agree this, we can go on to acknowledge that there is only one reality – one truth but that our minds can never get to the point where we fully know that reality – that truth.

All we can do is to get is closer to that truth. All we can ever really have is a perception of that reality – of that truth.

The psychologist Carl Jung had written on his mantelpiece words that translate to mean ‘I seek the impossible.’ He knew he could never know the full truth, but he also knew he could try and get his own perception of the truth as close as is possible to that reality.

Again we can see here that our perceptions are now down to our mind and our mental state.

The key learning points here are this:- We can alter our perception of reality by choosing to seek the truth and our own mental state will play a part in this.

As we seek the truth so our perceptions change and that allows us to change.

Activities like meditation and communicating with our subconscious mind all help to expand our mind and to understand more about the true nature of reality.

These activities lead to a much heightened sense of awareness which in turn continues to expand our perceptions.

This suggests that we can internally improve our perceptual abilities.

We looked earlier at how what we see is processed within us such that we perceive seeing things rather than actually seeing those things.

However our whole body does this too. Our body, through its organs, senses much more and this information is taken to our mind where it is also processed.

We know that our eyes and ears both see and hear within a certain range of light and sound. What is less well-known, and less accepted, is that we also feel within a range of frequencies of matter.

Just because we cannot see something, it does not mean it is not there. In the case of light we know there are also infrared and ultraviolet frequencies. These are outside our body's organs range but inside the range that our electrical instruments can pick them up.

We know though too that animals have a different, sometimes wider range of hearing seeing and smelling and tasting and feeling. We can therefore conclude that the minds of animals will therefore have different perceptions of reality.

We are now at the point where we can consider that a certain type of light energy, or something connected with that light energy, one even beyond our sensory range, might be able to expand our awareness such that it changes what we perceive around us.

What we would have here then is something external that could change our perceptual ability.

If we now had advance knowledge of an event that could positively change our perceptions in a special way, we might be able to combine that with our inner ability to change our perceptual awareness through meditation a timely way that leads to a much desired outcome.

This combination of external and internal transformation could then result in a massive change in our perceptions such that we could begin to see, hear, feel, smell and even taste things well beyond the ranges for what we can currently perceptualise.

Our very state of consciousness in regards to our surroundings would change and it is here we can see how an evolution of consciousness could come about.

As you will read, this will begin to lend credence to the idea that a certain type of light from the Sun, mentioned in the Inca prophecy, is close to being very special indeed.

This though does not quite yet explain how Gods and Ancestors will be seen, or perceived, but it might just explain how we will experience life in this new environment.

In a nutshell, there will be those people who have prepared for this external event internally and there will be others who have not. (Preparations do not appear to be that easy and this is why the discussion and dialogue modules were designed so that they can help groups of people work together to prepare by gaining a better understanding of what they must do and potentially how – more about these at the end of the year.)

We are now at the point of being able to see how the advancing galactic current sheet and our Earth's reducing magnetic field can begin to slowly alter our perceptions of reality. Both these connected things allow more light and energy to get through to us.

Leaving aside this 'specialness' to the light for a moment, we can begin to answer the question of how perceptual awareness might lead us to thinking that we can actually see what have been called 'Gods' in the prophecy and how we might see our 'Ancestors' again.

As many of you will know, I have long since discarded the need for multiples of absurd, scientifically unexplainable, dimensions. (The only need for multiple dimensions was to try and make the mathematics work when trying to explain how their relativity theory might fit with quantum theory. When you ditch relativity though, any more than 3 dimensions become totally unnecessary)

Instead I prefer to think in terms Ron Pearson's complete, flaw free, theory of Quantum Gravity and its many different matter frequency systems all in the same area but just outside our current range of sensory perception.

This actually presents people with an easy 'mind switch' here – instead of different dimensions just think in terms of different matter frequency systems.

If our range of perception is increased by this special ray of light, it would begin to possibly explain how we might now perceive these other matter frequency systems (Worlds) and the 'Beings' that live on them. (In regards to 'Beings' think of Ancestors, Giants, Angels etc.)

You might like to imagine moving into an energetic environment where you begin to perceive these 'Beings'.

It is quite possible that this would occur geographically at first with people living in some places where they were experiencing greater amounts of this energy before people living elsewhere on this World (Our own matter frequency system).

It is also quite likely that people, who were expanding their own awareness through, for example, meditation, would also begin to experience these things before those who chose not to prepare for the coming changes.

It is also likely that some people have already started experiencing these things and who are having deep trouble trying to account for what they are observing.

For various reasons, if they report their experience to the medical community, it can lead to quite severe & unwanted outcomes. Unfortunately, this has already led to some people already being institutionalised. We must be wary who we share our experiences with but we must also have a safe platform to help people talk to others about these things.

All of these experiences would certainly fit the meaning of 'Pachacuti' as they could all easily fall under the banner of having 'our reality overturned'.

It would certainly be a huge mental transformation if we began to perceive other 'Beings' from the other Worlds of Spirit. This too would certainly be worthy of being called a great reintegration if we found we could communicate with all our ancestors again.

To some this will all sound quite preposterous, but we have to be serious about this subject when there are several different long term prophecies all describing a similar future occurrence and that it has happened before.

We need to take a much closer look at how our perceptions can be overturned by external means and some of this is covered later.

It also requires us to take a closer look at just what this special light might be and how it might relate to our perceived colour of the Sun and its early warning signs for us.

A special ray of light?

On the 9th July 2022 I was sent a science article from a lovely lady who attends the harmony time gatherings (Thanks Virginie G.) Apart from being a wonderful singer she is also highly intuitive. In this case I suspect that she seemed to have sensed the article might be on to something important.

I have to honestly say that when I first glanced through it, I realised it was going to require some deep examination and I just did not have the time at that point to do this. I did however sense an inkling of its significance because Virginie had been sent to me.

As readers will know, I never know what the next theme will be for my newsletter until quite late on in the month it was only when the theme of coloured light from the Sun had emerged that I remembered this paper.

Finding some time, I dived in and proceeded to explore it and some related scientific papers and out popped some very relevant information in regards to the Universal prophecy.

I will continue what was found out about the ray of light a little later but we need to take a short detour to look at the nature of this prophecy because of one rather startling revelation.

For those of you unaware of the term 'Universal prophecy', it is one I coined when I wrote about them first in my book Grail Bound . It would appear that legends, stories, visions, dreams and prophecies from around the World are all talking about the same future event and that something similar also happened long ago in our past.

In other words it was a long term cyclic event. Only natural cyclic events, occurring with long periods of time between them, can ever be foreseen in the long distant future. This works in a very different way from short term prophecy.

I had stumbled across this cycle through my Earth Energy line research and had seen a connection with our solar system passing through the galactic current sheet roughly every 12,000 years.

When this happens it seems that a string of similar events occur which experienced by all life on Earth.

It would not be wrong to call these evolutionary moments.

I go into these evolutionary moments in more detail in past podcasts and newsletters but right now I need to move on to the startling revelation about one of the colours that our Sun is said to change to in one of the universal prophecies. The explanation for this colour emerged from investigating this scientific paper.

The two red Suns

The Hopi Indian nation Elders have long foretold about a coming red Sun when a wave of purification would sweep across the Earth. It was a time when the people on this planet had a chance to either evolve or to not evolve.

It was also a time when possibly many people might also perish – much depends on our choices right now and our choices when the time comes when we see the sun with this red colour.

The Hopi are not alone in saying these things and it is by no means an 'End of the World' type prophecy. It is more likely an 'End of cycle' solar event and the chance for a huge portion of humanity to evolve their consciousness.

The later Sun, after the black Sun, with its deep red colour though has also been called a blood coloured Sun and the prophecies here indicate that it might be something that could be harmful to us. The science that explains this particular colour seems to support this possible threat.

It is at this point that I need to delve a little deeper into long term prophecies and short term prophecies and by doing this I will introduce you to a person that has conclusively proved that prophecy is not only possible but that we too can learn to do this.

Indeed this is something we actually must do as perceiving the Sun change colour in advance of it happening is appearing to be ever more important.

Long term prophecy is only possible when it is associated with a long term cyclic event.

All long term prophecies move into becoming short term ones the nearer they are to the actual event, or series of events, being foretold.

When the move to short term happens, there are many more ways that we can get information passed through to us via our subconscious mind. As that event becomes nearer, that information becomes even more accurate.

At this point, I would like to introduce you to (or remind you of) an amazing man and his work over much of his life.

Chris Robinson is a dream detective who is able to dream what he will see the next day – in a very clear and precise manner. He has been tested many times and proven true every time so much so that he has been in regular contact with the intelligence services in the UK and the USA for decades.

The shocking truth for many, including Jung when he discovered the same thing, is that we can learn to get very clear advance information on what we will experience the following day – as well as the distant future.

We can also get good information up to a further two weeks in advance in some cases and when very definite future events have reached a very high degree of probability we can get good clear information about 2-3 months in advance.

The following is a short video of an interview done with Chris where he tells the interviewer a bit more detail on how he works as he describes how he tipped off the authorities well before the Lockerbie air disaster when a bomb blew up a Pan Am passenger plane over Scotland in December 1988.

The title is 'Postscript – Chris Robinson'

(I would like to personally add that I have known Chris for over 20 years. He really is a lovely man who has additionally been given the chance to do some miraculous healings. I have been fortunate to have had long discussions with him on his work and have been in an email group with him for many years. How he does what he does, and how we can learn to do the same, is covered in the discussion modules I have been working on which will hopefully be ready next January.)

Having perhaps helped you see the significance of what we can all do, especially when we learn to expand our awareness and our range of perceptions as the energetic environment increases, we can progress to look at the Sun in more detail.

Unfortunately the old scientific view of the Sun is also out of date and is only being kept alive by a highly promoted and 'financialised' narrative.

The Standard model of the Sun should be consigned the dustbin of history but this has been kept to obfuscate a truer understanding of these cyclic solar events and how often they occur.

Our Sun is an Electric Sun

The reason this is so important to know is because of the basic laws of electricity and charges. We all know that if we touch both the live wire and the neutral wire in a plug in our home we will get an electric shock because our bodies create a circuit.

Touching however is not necessary when it comes to the transfer of power and energy across space. A highly charged object will be affected by a positively or negatively charged field when it moves through that field.

Consider here the advancing Galactic current sheet with its charged electric field heading towards our Sun.

As it is really an Electric Sun, we will really come to know this because there will be fireworks as the two electrical objects cross one another.

It is time therefore to look at the evidence that our Sun is electric because it has become far more important that we know the truth.

The old 'Standard' model for the Sun started when they were able to do spectral analysis of light. This led early scientists to observe that the light from the Sun came from the elements of hydrogen and helium.

This resulted in the thinking back then that the Sun was just one continuous hydrogen bomb explosion and some kind of some giant nuclear fusion reactor.

The 'Standard' model of the Sun developed a bit further and was later considered to be a spherical ball of gas in varying states of ionisation with hydrogen in the core of the Sun being completely ionised.

This ionised gas is known as plasma. Plasmas are magnetic & that was the reason given for why the Sun has a magnetic field. Their explanation was that this field was being driven by an internal solar dynamo.

This way of thinking meant that the sun could not be considered as solid & that its gases at the poles & the equator had to rotate at different speeds to create this dynamo effect.

This though does not explain why the Sun's magnetic field reverses every 11 years.

Unfortunately most people just don't have the time to investigate what scientists think and the general population seems to, all too readily accept, whatever the scientific news media tells them. (Well perhaps not everyone after the recent debacle).

The truer picture that is now emerging is that these news outlets are nothing more than propaganda outlets that push out a desired narrative so that 'dependent' scientists can gain more money, power and status.

The Standard model of the Sun and its four problems

There are now four major, recognised problems with the Standard model of the Sun (there may be more).

There is the Solar Lithium problem, the Solar Neutrino problem, the Solar Abundance problem and the Coronal heating problem.

The last one is perhaps the easiest to understand.

The Sun's surface temperature is around 6000 degrees Celsius but higher up in its Corona, part of the Sun's atmosphere, it is millions of degrees hotter.

The 'Standard' model of the Sun has no way of explaining this.

We get a bit closer to the truth about the Sun when we start to think of it as having a solid core.

Back in 2017 two researchers from Harvard University reported creating metallic hydrogen in the laboratory for the 1st time.

They squeezed a sample in a diamond anvil to temperatures and pressures unknown on Earth – but not unknown at the centre of the Sun.

More recently a new hypothesis has emerged from Dr Pierre-Marie Robitaille. (Inventor of the MRI machine used in hospitals all around the World)

His hypothesis seems to solve all the 4 problems mentioned earlier.

The depletion of Lithium 6 is linked to stabilising a layered hexagonal lattice structure for metallic hydrogen. This allows for an inner cubic lattice structure of metallic hydrogen to form as a solid core for the Sun.

Helioseismic vibrations seem to show that this solid core is also rotating at its centre.

One of Dr Robitaille's scientific papers on the metallic Sun can be obtained here.

If you prefer a you tube video the title is :-

Lithium and the liquid metallic hydrogen model of the Sun (9mins) click here

What some of you might have realised is that high temperature Metallic hydrogen is a super conductor of electricity. In other words there is little or no resistance as electricity passes through it.

Consider again the possible effects of our Electric Sun with a conductive metallic core, passing through the Galactic current sheet.

With the current sheet having three aspects – Cosmic energy, Plasma (with a positive and negative electrically charged reversal zone in the middle of the sheet) and Dust, we have to imagine how our Earth and our Sun might be affected as all three increase in density and pass through us.

We will actually feel all three aspects in three ways too.

Directly as they hit us, indirectly as a result of them each hitting our Sun and us then being affected by the changes from the Sun and thirdly from any affects resulting from our inner Sun – the inner core of our earth which will be hit by a major jolt of energy

I cannot cover all of these aspects and effects in this article but we can consider the Sun and why it will go a deep red colour. We can also look at what that will mean and how that will be a sign for us to act quickly.

The clue in regards to the colour of the Sun came from the article that Virginie kindly sent me.

It is titled 'Reconnection and fast particle production in tokamak and solar plasmas' by K.G. McClements. A pdf can be read via this link

<https://scientific-publications.ukaea.uk/wp-content/uploads/Preprints/UKAEA-CCFE-PR1843.pdf>

In the abstract for the article it mentions MAST which stands for Mega Ampere Spherical Tokamak. This was a nuclear fusion experiment that was testing a Spherical Tokamak nuclear fusion reactor.

The scientists were essentially looking to find ways to harness fusion power to generate electricity. They were doing this by trying to model what they were observing from the Sun.

(Yes they were thinking of the terms of the Sun as a giant fusion reactor. For those of you who would like to watch a 17 min video about trying to practically model the electric Sun here is one done by the SAFIRE team – click here)

However what the Tokamak scientists were specifically looking at was the energy in Solar flares.

Solar explosions

Solar flares are defined as intense bursts of radiation that occur as a result of the magnetic energy found in sunspots. They release large amounts of solar, gamma, and electromagnetic radiation into space and can last from between several minutes to several hours.

Solar flares arise when certain different types of sunspots get near to one another. Sunspots come in all sizes and shapes. Some groups of them form complex magnetic structures and it is these that can produce solar flares.

The image above is called "magnetogram" and it shows the magnetic layout of a sunspot region. The red colour indicates sunspots or areas with a negative polarity and the blue colour indicates areas with positive polarity sunspots.

Electromagnetism is therefore important when it comes to the creation of solar flares and these two oppositely charged areas trigger can them off.

The approaching galactic current sheet, with its positively and negatively charged plasma will also be a trigger for solar explosions.

Solar flares are classified according to their strength. The smallest ones are A-class, followed by B, C, M and X, the largest. They are essentially giant explosions on the Sun that send energy, light and high speed particles into space.

This classification though is not entirely complete as there are much larger solar explosions than flares. Growing in power we get to mini Nova's, Dwarf Nova's and a range of more and more powerful Supernova's (Supernovae if you want to be grammatically correct).

What we know about observations of flares and nova's is that they are cyclic events and the size of explosion is also cyclic. In other words you won't get two mini Novas happening only 10 years apart with our Sun. Other Suns/Stars in the Universe will be subject to other external conditions and their cycle rates will vary because of their external conditions.

Only when we start to consider that we live in an Electric universe can we begin to see the cycles within cycles at work. The galactic current sheet passing through our solar system is just one of these cycles.

We also have smaller 6000 year, 3000year and even 1500 year cycles – as well as an added element of natural chaos by way of interstellar magnetic fields. It appears that the Earth's and our Sun's environment is affected, to a greater or lesser extent, each time one of these cyclic events passes through us.

Right now, we must consider the effects of plasma cosmic energy and dust hitting our Sun.

When the fusion scientists studied the observations from their research they found out a couple of interesting features.

In their own words they write 'The results from MAST lend weight to the conjecture that large numbers of ions are accelerated to sub-MeV energies in flares.'

If we accept their conjecture, we can go on to consider the following:-

Firstly it seems that in a solar flare large numbers of 'sub-MeV ions' are being accelerated and that these previously have gone undetected.

The scientists already knew there was an acceleration of electrons and bursts of microwave and X-ray emissions but they also discovered a delay between the first appearance of the faster electrons and something called bursts Balmer-alpha emissions.

These Balma-alpha emissions are found in the regions of plasma a long way from the original site of the flare and the faster particle acceleration.

The reason this is important is that these emissions are frequencies of light (H-alpha) that are in a specific visible spectrum of colour that is deep-red.

In other words what has been found is that solar explosions have a deep red colour.

If this explosion is large enough, or widespread enough, this would lead to the whole Sun having a deep red colour just as has been mentioned in the prophecies.

Advance information on seeing a deep red Sun would give us knowledge of an impending solar explosion and something that could cause humanity many problems if we were not prepared for this.

To summarise for a moment.

It seems that in their experiments, scientists have come to think that, with actual solar flares resulting from out of different polarity sunspots, previously undetected, accelerated frequencies of light (sub MeV ions) are being emitted.

They also discovered that there was also a short delay before a deep red spectrum of light would be seen. (This is actually light from the Hydrogen being released)

The science does not stop at this point because investigations led to finding another paper titled SUB-MeV ION GENERATION BY STANDING WAVE EXCITATION OF IONIZED GASES by Sz. Turnár† et al. <https://inspirehep.net/files/d72a24b4536c8a8e1023a7b347ac4586>

What these scientists seem to have found out is that these accelerated SubMeV ions, from these Solar explosions, are not caused by electromagnetic pulses, but instead by an entire electric field. (Approaching current sheet)

They went on to find that these accelerated electrons in the gas plasma were being ripped off by standing waves within the whole field. (A standing wave is a vibration within a field where some points along the wave remain fixed while others between them vibrate with the maximum amplitude.)

This was important to them for trying to find ways to manage their fusion reactors so they could find a way to produce sustainable electricity without having the whole thing explode.

This now meant they had found a possible way to control the gas plasma inside the reactors by using vibratory standing waves.

The relevance for us in regards to what is happening to the Sun and Solar flares is that we can now see that the whole process on the surface of the Sun might very well also be being controlled by standing waves.

If this is the case it would explain the uniformity that exists with the regular cycles of these events and how this can be sustained over long periods of time. The only thing that could do this though would have to be connected to the way the universe itself was being continually created.

Before we get to that theory, it is important to know that the Sun itself produces its own extremely low frequency vibrations.

There are scientists that actually recording these vibrations in order to find out more about the interior of the Sun and its cycles.

To do this they use a technique they call Helioseismology. (It was this method that was used to deduce that the metallic core of the Sun was rotating – this was mentioned earlier in this newsletter)

At the University of Birmingham there has been a research group called the Solar Oscillations Network, with the acronym BiSON, looking into this since 1985.

Prof Yvonne Elsworth, of the School of Physics and Astronomy at the University of Birmingham reports that the Sun is 'very much like a musical instrument except that its typical notes are at a very low frequency - some 100,000 times lower than middle C'.

Those scientists who still cling to the old standard model of the Sun have been left thinking that these vibrations must arise due to some 'internal natural cavity' within the Sun that can somehow trap these vibrations.

I know – if some Scientists consider that 'Hollow Earth' theories are pseudoscience, how come 'Hollow Sun' theories can be acceptable?

Standing wave summary

Low vibration standing waves have been found to be able direct accelerating, previously undetected, deep red light as a result of a solar explosion caused by an Electric field.

Vibratory waves can do this and these have been found to be linked with the grey areas of the lost light of Hubble.

You will now remember the astronauts on the international space station who found the grey areas on the Hubble image to have an 'order' to them. These were later shown to also be due to organised waves and structures that could only have occurred as a result of an electric field.

In other words we now have organising standing waves within the electric field of the galactic current sheet and we find organising standing waves within our electric sun that can direct accelerating light.

With two sources of standing waves and their inherent ordering of matter, we can begin to see how something both ordered and cyclic can be predictable in regards to regular outcomes as the two sources and their waves approach each other.

This will now also explain how we can experience a cycle of colour changes, both perceived and/or actual, in relation to our Sun.

The yellow sun can become a white sun and then a red sun and then a black sun. However what we are possibly not sure yet is whether the black sun might come before the red sun.

There are also further unanswered questions.

We can perhaps see how we will perceive a deep red Sun, but what causes a black Sun and what is the wave of purification all about and indeed when this wave actually starts?

We also need to look at how all Space can be really light rather than the darkness we perceive now.

There is also a possibility that, at some future point in time, Space will be perceived by us as completely white? We may therefore also ask how that might be possible too.

As you will read, it is something we may need to seriously consider.

The Black Sun

The black sun is something that has been symbolised from long, long ago – well before the Nazi's co-opted it to mean victory.

Early Norse legends talk about a 'Sonnensrad' – a Sun wheel and it is with this translation that we get a possible clue to time and solar cycles of time.

The second clue comes from the symbol's design with its twelve radial sig runes - these look quite like they are representing flashes of lightning.

We have to wonder if this symbol and its origin actually stemmed right back 12000 years to when Mankind may have last experienced a Black Sun – one that suddenly illuminated and flashed out in all directions.

Dust in Space

It has been found that hot dust is widespread in space and that it comes from different astronomical environments. Hot dust has been detected in the normal star-forming galaxies and low-luminosity Active galaxies.

The presence of hot dust seems to be explained by nanometer-size dust grains that have been heated by single photons of light which they absorb.

This hot dust is most likely to be very small size carbonaceous grains (Carbon has a very dark colour)

With the small dark grains of dust absorbing single photons it effectively blocks these photons of light from passing through them.

With dust being widespread, this means it will be blocking large amount of light from getting through to our space telescopes

The following is a science paper about the large amount of dust found in between the galaxies is here, along with a link:-

Astrophysical Journal 2018 Vol 867, No 2

<https://iopscience.iop.org/article/10.3847/1538-4357/aae2b0>

All this dust now explains why much of so much of space seems dark to us but it does not explain all of the dark areas in space. (The white areas on the Lost Light of Hubble image)

To explain this, all we need to do is to recall that the cyclic galactic current sheet comes with dust. Our own Sun's current sheet is much, much cleaner and has little or no dust. So little in fact, that when our Earth passes through it every 8 to 10 days, we notice no effects at all from any dust.

However when the large amount of dust begins to hit our Sun it will darken quickly. It may be only a day or two but our Sun will become black with all the dust until pressure and heat has built up enough to explode it all outwards in all directions.

Tiny microbeads of glass with newly created elements inside them will be sent throughout the solar system. Much will burn up in our atmosphere but some will probably get through. Our moon, without an atmosphere will get hit by lots of these glass beads. Indeed one of the main reasons spacecraft were sent to the moon was to pick up samples of soil to find these glassy beads. They found plenty of them.

We will start getting images of seeing a black Sun, or symbols for a black Sun, in our dreams and meditations in the lead up to this event. This is why we need many people to start recording and sharing their dreams. Advance warning of this event could save millions of lives if an Earth facing solar event is larger than expected.

A shared prophecy from many people here will become far more reliable than any news program.

A visual phenomenon

It is time to now look into how the remaining areas of darkness in Space could be full of light.

We know that there are many different frequencies of light that we cannot see but that can be measured by our electrical instruments,

But, could there be a type of light, or something that we might be able to see in the future, that these instruments cannot pick up?

Although we have already looked a special new kind of light that comes from the Sun which changes it to a deep red colour, it seems we need another special type of light that we can perceive, one that seems to have gone undetected by the Space telescopes, and somehow this also needs to have some kind of purification effect in order for the prophecies to be correct.

If such a light did exist it could mean that there may be long term cyclical times when we look up at the night sky and see nothing but light.

I know this might seem all a bit magical but there is a visual phenomenon that perhaps gives us a clue in regards to this question.

To begin to address this, I would first invite you to look at the sun with your eyes shut, if you have not done so.

When you do this you can see the rather strange sensation of little tiny specs of light rapidly appearing and disappearing and where, sometimes, you even get some sense of direction in these moments of light.

You may well ask the following questions:-

'How can it be possible that we get these sensations of light when our eyes are closed?'

'How can light appear from darkness?'

What might surprise you is that a few scientists seem to have studied what seems to be something very similar.

High up above the Earth's atmosphere, Astronauts experience a very similar thing. They even have a name for it – it is called Astronaut's eye.

Light flashes (LF) are perceived specifically by Astronauts in space due to cosmic rays (high-energy charged particles) that come from beyond the Earth's atmosphere.

Astronauts who had recently returned from space missions to the Hubble Space telescope, the International Space station and Mir Space station reported seeing these LF under different conditions.

In a survey of 59 Astronauts they were seen mainly before sleeping. Most of them saw a white light but some saw a bluish light and a few reported yellow, green orange and red colours.

Around 66% of the time they were perceived as dots or stars but around 25% of the time they were seen as streaks and 8% of the time cloudlike shapes. They even sensed a direction to the streaks with them being diagonal or sideways but none vertical.

Apollo Astronaut James Irwin described it as "a brilliant streak across the retina" and astronauts on the Moon missions stated that it would happen on average every 2.9 minutes.

On the normal Space missions that stayed in Earth's orbit, these would occur on average every 6.8 minutes.

It seemed that both orbital altitude and inclination had a positive correlation with the rate at which they were seen – the further away from Earth; the more they would experience.

Experiments were carried out with Astronauts wearing helmets that could track the cosmic ray particles and match them against the Astronauts observations.

Researchers concluded that the visual phenomena were indeed caused by cosmic rays.

They then tried projecting a 3 MeV neutron beam into their heads but that level of energy produced no light flashes. With an increase level of 14 MeV neutron beam, however, LF were reported.

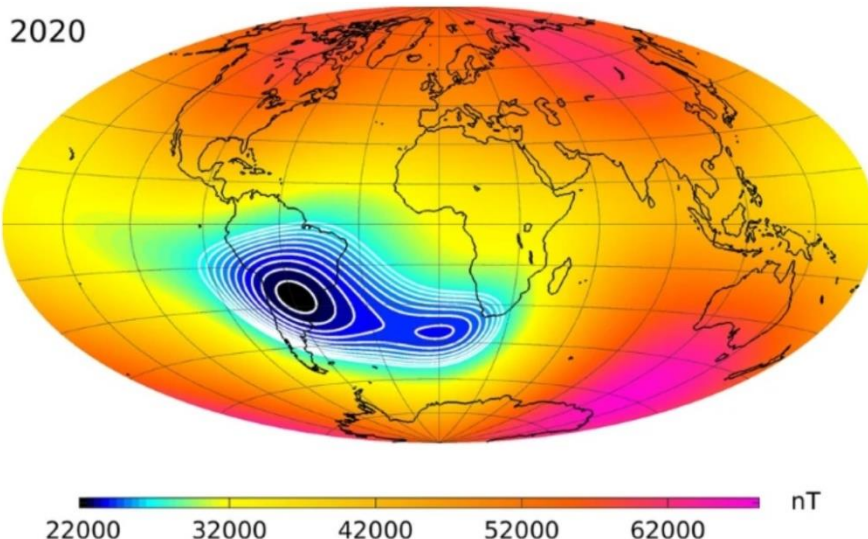

Researchers also established the orientation of the streaks corresponded to the orientation of the beam entering the eye and they also found LF when the beam entered via the back of the head. This latter observation ruled out any direct stimulation of the visual cortex.

The conclusion was that there were two possible ways these LF were being observed - either by activation of neurons along the visual pathway or by actual light stimulating the retina.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Cosmic\_ray\_visual\_phenomena

Quite rightly you might now say "Ah yes but this is something experienced up in Space."

The above image shows the large Magnetic Low anomaly over the South Atlantic Ocean and Brazil. When the space shuttle travels over this area of the Earth it starts to experience all sorts of computer errors and shutdown problems.

This is because the magnetic field strength in this region fails to stop a much larger amount of cosmic rays from getting through to us.

This is such a problem now that the Hubble telescope shuts down as it passes over this region.

A powerful X-ray telescope lasted only a few hours after launch as it passed through this region. The Japanese Space Agency (JAXA) said that one of the satellite's gyroscopic directional systems had failed when over this anomaly.

The White Sun

What this tells us is that, as our magnetic field strength reduces further, more and more of us will experience what has been called Astronaut's eye.

Indeed, it may well be that we already have and that when we close our eyes and look at the Sun, we are already perceiving this extra light coming from cosmic energy. It is important to remember here that cosmic energy does not just come from galaxies in outer space, it also comes from our Sun.

If we consider that our magnetic field has been gradually diminishing for the last 20 or so years, more cosmic energy will have got through from our Sun.

If this had been processed by our eyes in a similar way to Astronauts eye, it may well be why we have a gradual perception that our Sun is becoming whiter and whiter. We might presume that this extra white light we are perceiving is making the yellow Sun appear whiter and whiter.

The Red Sun

The same explanation may now also apply to the first red Sun that we will perceive.

The astronauts also mentioned they saw the colours orange and red. With even more cosmic energy this white Sun might then become perceived as orange and red. If this is the Hopi red Sun of Purification, then the extra cosmic energy must have something to do with this purification. This would last until the black Sun and then the deep red Sun mentioned earlier.

It would seem that we are now sitting within a window of opportunity here to make the most of this increasing cosmic energy. It is therefore time to look at this purification a bit more.

Purification

That increasing cosmic energy seems to be linked to this purification means we need to look into the effects of cosmic energy on ourselves.

To begin with we know that cosmic energy is something that mutates cells and specifically heart cells. Greater heart coherence between people has already been measured by some scientists (Heart Math institute) at times of greater cosmic energy.

It is fairly likely that this cosmic energy will be reactivating many of our cells and our genes in our bodies as we know that increases in the past have been linked to times of evolutionary growth.

We also hear in other Universal prophecies that the abilities of empathy and telepathy will become more enhanced.

The problem here though is that these things are unlikely to happen for everyone in equal ways. Purification it seems, also depends much on embracing these changes and looking to develop ourselves both individually and in groups.

Linking purification with cosmic energy is therefore going to be much harder to prove.

Indeed, this is probably something that will only ever be seen and experienced within groups who work on their purification over time.

The reason for saying this is that the wave of purification that is talked about in the prophecies may well be a wave that takes a long time to build – just as we are finding with the increasing cosmic energy and the slowly reducing magnetic field of the Earth.

Intriguingly here, there are some prophecies that also talk about an increasing luminosity becoming apparent in some people.

For that reason, I am going to leave trying to prove this connection here but instead let you consider one rather striking possibility – increasing cosmic energy having a link to the evolution of consciousness.

To explore this link though, we must go back to the idea that all Space is light.

Space is all light

We can now perhaps address the question about how the whole of space could actually be light.

To do this though we need to accept three possibilities:–

Firstly that the Toltec story might have been referring to a moment in time in the past when all the darkness in the night sky had gone.

Secondly that the dark areas are really areas where there are such low numbers of photons that it renders them undetectable

&

Thirdly that it is our perceptions that either indicates to our mind that the whole of Space is either dark or light.

In other words, at the moment, we could be seeing nothing as, in reality, there are areas of Space where nothing is detected because the numbers of photons are too low.

Or instead, at the moment, we could be seeing much more cosmic energy in our nearby environment, probably because of our solar system moving through the galactic current sheet, so we would be beginning to sense much greater amounts of light being perceived by our mind.

What we may well also find is that currently we perceive space as dark but when our perceptions are changed by a special ray of light, we might perceive a truer reality that Space is all Light and there are no dark areas at all.

Our greater range of perceptual awareness, through coming evolutionary changes, may allow us to see far greater ranges of frequencies such that we perceive light everywhere. Even our bodies may start appearing more luminous.

To pursue this further we must now look into one of the most fiercely attacked ways of thinking in these 'so-called' modern times. – Survival after death.

We do not die

I have been most fortunate in my life to meet some incredibly talented and skilled people who have in turn kindly told me about their experiences and their different ways of thinking when it comes to the nature of reality itself.

Because of this, for over 20 years now, I have known and fully accepted that the death of the physical body does not stop the mind from living on. Thanks to Ron Pearson's theory of Quantum Gravity, we know also have a sound scientific basis for where the mind goes and that is on to another different matter frequency system. Some people call these Worlds of Spirit.

Ron wrote an 'easy to read' book called 'Intelligence behind the Universe' which has lots of wonderful information on how this phenomena can be explained – Click here for a link to read more and to buy it

We are very fortunate to be given the experience of the mind during these transitional times and these moments are called 'Near Death Experiences' (N.D.E's).

One of the early pioneers in gathering these experiences was Dr Sam Parnia who used to work at Southampton Hospital in the UK. Now a professor of medicine in the USA he still does research in these things. He was also part of the biggest scientific study ever of consciousness after clinical death.

<https://bioethics.georgetown.edu/2015/07/consciousness-after-clinical-death-the-biggest-ever-scientific-study-published>

What he showed was that the mind must have still been operational after clinical death and that is after all signs of brain activity have ceased. He had patients who were able to see events from outside of their body that actually happened (They were seen and proved later on the hospital video recordings) at a time when then patient had no brain activity.

When patients did 'die' like this on the operating table – and then come back to life later – he was always present in the intensive care unit to ask them about their experiences.

White light on death

Another more recent investigator of these N.D.E's is Dr Zac Bush. He too would ask patients about their experiences and three of the common things they said to him were

Why did you bring me back?

I felt and saw a white light and a feeling of expansion.

I felt completely accepted for the first time in my life.

It is here we can see that white light is being linked to an expansion of consciousness after our physical body dies.

When the body dies the mind is thought to move on to the World of Spirit where the minds of many of our ancestors are found living. The mind has travelled across between our World of the physical senses to the Worlds of Spirit. This journey has many names and has been taken in many ways by many people both still alive and dead.

At these times, our mind perceives things in different ways depending on a number of factors. One of the common perceptions though is a white light and the whole new experience has been said to be mind expanding.

The following is a short video that Dr Zach Bush made which you might like to watch before a summary is made.

Death is NOT an Endpoint - Zach Bush MD – 8 mins

The continuation of the Toltec story of the Smoky Mirror

The God of the night, the smoky mirror, looked up and around at the stars and he saw that they were made of light.

He then looked at the space between the stars and he saw that it too was made of light.

Then he looked down at his hands and saw that they too were made of stars and that the stars were made of light.

And in that moment, the smoky mirror awakened forever from the dream of darkness, the dream of this planet.

He saw that we are nothing but light.

He saw that everything was made of light and that the light from deep within the universe brings us knowledge of who we really are.

It was then that the smoky mirror discovered something really important.

We are all children of the light.

Returning to the light after our physical body dies brings us further confirmation that are true 'Self' is light.

Our mind, with its specific range of senses, is currently having an experience here on our physical matter frequency system.

What some of you may be now thinking is whether or not the advancing galactic current sheet and its effects on our Sun is really going to be a large scale extinction event where the minds billions of people will experience the white light as they pass over to the World of Spirit.

I don't think that this is what will happen.

I do however think the experience will come with a choice as we always seem to be given a choice on this World.

Instead, I suspect that many of us will get to live through the experience of death and have the full expansion of consciousness that comes with that. They will continue to then live on this matter frequency system.

However, there will be others who choose not to ride the wave of purification as it intensifies. They will fail to enhance their innate abilities in the new energetic environment and because of that they will fail to have this incredible evolutionary experience.

The difference will likely bring about two groups of people – those who need help from others and those who can help others.

Those who can help will become the new guides in the new World.

To get to this though will not be without its challenges which is why learning to work in groups, learning to become a prophecy and learning to increase our empathy and telepathy and learning heart centred decision making are all things we need to do.

This whole subject warrants so much more attention and discussion and there will be ways to do this on the sacred network in the forums that each group will have and be able to set up.

Czechia type 4 energy lines and their intersections

In this section I really wanted to promote the work being done by Gary M. Vasey over in Czechia. You can hear the passion he now has for this in his videos and it is vital work that I hope many more people will also start doing as we need more people finding and verifying sacred sites.

Finding these energy lines and their nodes is really exciting and you never quite know where it will take you. It is very much like a treasure hunt and something I would wish to encourage many more people to do.

You may think that Gary has the whole country to himself when it comes to finding these main energy lines, so it must be easy for him to keep finding these lovely places. However there are many countries in Europe that need more dowsing to find both the 4th order nodes and the 5th order nodes.

One of the other reasons I wanted to include Gary's video's here is that he has found a lovely way to get feedback on his work.

Anyone who has done one of my dowsing courses will know that I go on and on about the need to look for feedback to ensure you are not making it up.

For those of you who are new to dowsing, feedback is a sign that you are right. For example when you dowse for water, your feedback happens when that water is drilled or found.

This is not so easy with energy lines as they are invisible but there are ways when you work with nature and when you move between your conscious and subconscious mind.

One of the ways we get feedback is through symbolism. What Gary has found when he dowses in the summer months is that he finds far greater congregations of butterflies on the energy lines and their nodes. It is as though these lovely transformational creatures prefer to fly around these energetic areas when he comes across them.

What this means is that when he finally dowses a line or a node, even though the place has no obvious sign like a standing stone or a small chapel, he sees butterflies.

Our ability to switch between focus and aware states in dowsing of course helps us notice nature more but actually it is noticing nature first that is the right way around. An increasing awareness is one way to become better at dowsing.

Anyway, have a look at two of his short videos and like and subscribe to join him on his journey to find the Templar line as it crosses the country.

Avebury day image and observations

Last Sunday the 28th August this year was the day I took 20 lovely people to Avebury (They had to have all done my level 1 awareness and dowsing course – so it was not open for everyone.)

The day is promoted as a refresher of the skills they had picked up on the course by learning to differentiate between the type 1, 2 and 3 lines as well as to provide greater insight into the type 4 lines – in this case the Michael and Mary type 4 Earth energy lines that follow the St Michael Alignment (Ley/Leyline).

It turned out to be so much more than that though as they had all improved their dowsing skills even further since the course.

Of the many things we did, we also visited the Sanctuary, Silbury hill (You can see this behind the group in the image) and also to a place rarely visited by tourists – the Long stones. The size of these stones shocks everyone when seeing them for the first time.

One the things we looked at was the stages of energy line movement that must have happened at Avebury at some time in the past.

Ordinarily with nearly all alignments, we find their pair of lines following the alignment with slight changes in direction along the line as the energies come together to form nodes and then move apart again.

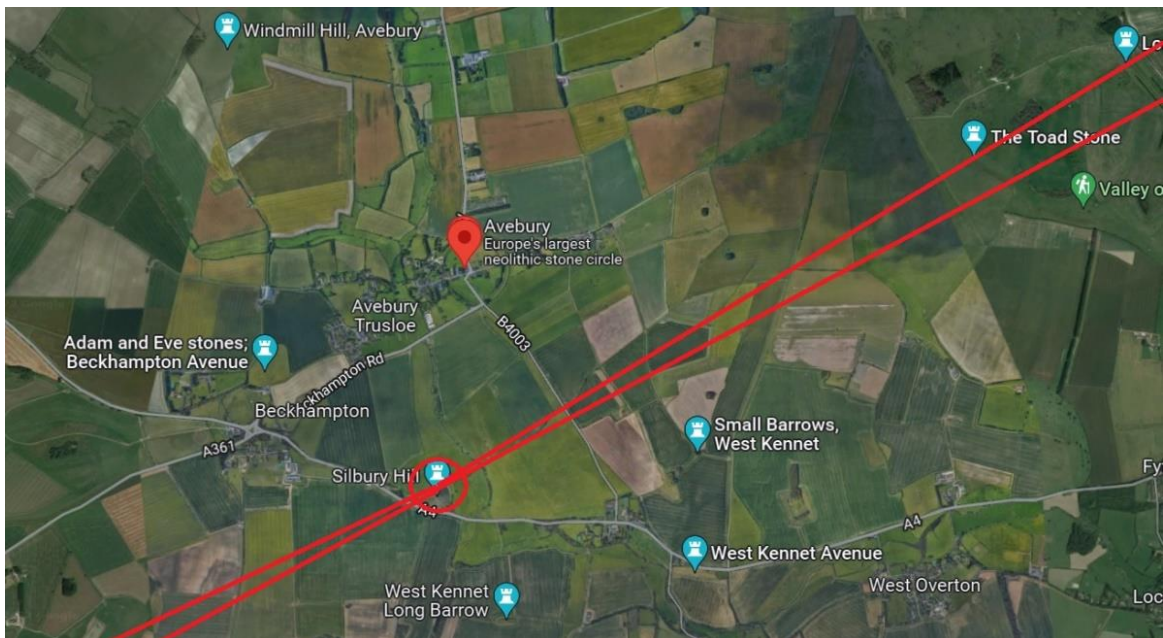

At Avebury though, Hamish Miller and Paul Broadhurst (As outlined in their book 'The Sun and the Serpent') found the Michael and Mary lines curving in huge 'S' shapes as they moved into the Avebury circles and then again as they move out of them.

They also run side by side in a North South direction as they run through these Stone circles. That North South direction is very different from its alignment.

So what is going on?

Well, we know Energy lines can be moved by people – and for both positive and negative reasons. It is my thinking that there have been three phases of movement occurring at Avebury - probably several thousands of years ago.

The Initial Energetic phase

I have only shown the type 4 energy lines in red. There are also 8 pairs of type 3 lines, 8 pairs of type 2 lines and 8 pairs of type 1 lines. I suspect that the original node was positioned at the top of Silbury hill. This 5000 year old man made hill (concentric blocks of chalk) seems to have been built to anchor the energies in one node location. It naturally had water around its base and this would have amplified the energies there.

We know there was a circular path that led to the top and therefore it was likely that some kind of group meditation would have taken place up there at key times in the year.

As this became popular, it would have become a problem getting everyone to gather at the top as there is limited room up there.

The second phase of energetic movement

I suspect that a second, and major phase of energy movement took place and this was when the Avebury complex was built with its circular ditch and Henge surrounding a large stone circle.

To assist with this an Avenue of stone was built – The Beckhampton Avenue – in order to help keep the type 4 energy lines in place as they headed to where their new intersection/node had been formed inside the new complex.

The two large Long stones would have been put up help guide the two type 4 energy lines into the stone avenue – in a similar way that two large stones are found doing the same thing at the Southern part of the current stone circle before the lines head down the West Kennet avenue of stones.

At this stage, it is likely that these two lines would have still roughly followed the alignment shown on the image below and lines would no longer pass through Silbury hill.

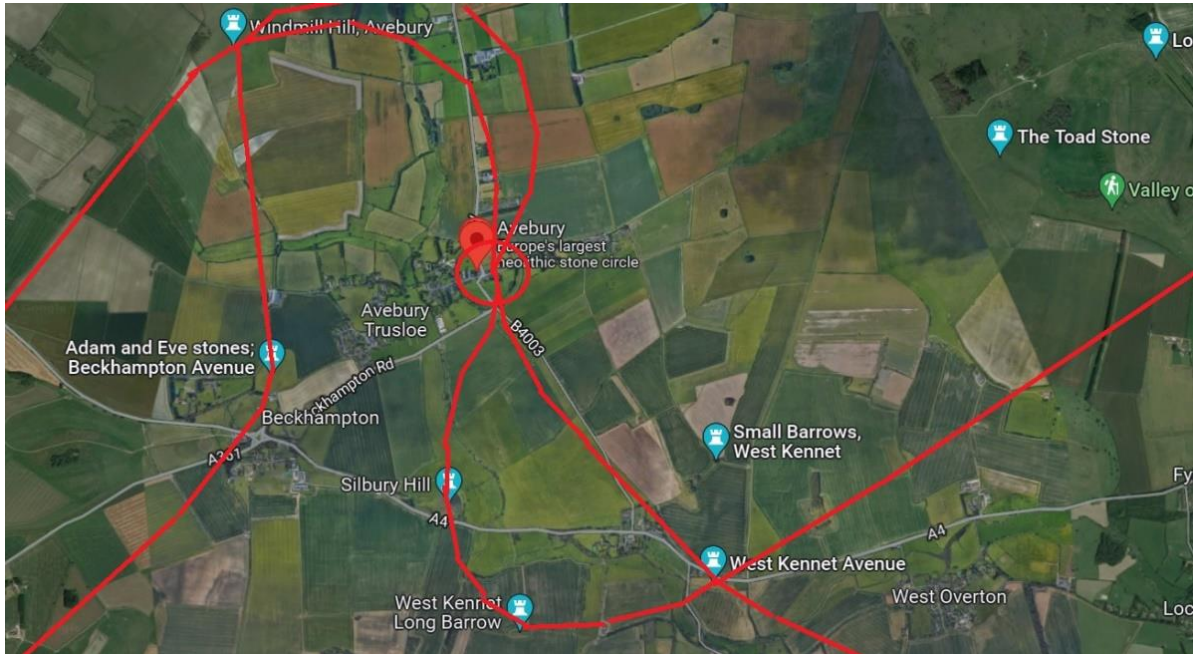

At this stage too, the key features we see today at Windmill hill, West Kennet long barrow and the Sanctuary, were not in existence.

This new Avebury complex would have been able to support many more people in group meditation and it is likely this became a beacon for pilgrimage and a place where whole tribes travelled great distances to come and join in the celebrations and rituals held here.

However, this energetic configuration is not what we see now, so at least one more stage must have taken place (There may have been incremental stages).

This was when the lines were moved up to the North to pass through a new node at Windmill hill and to the South – one to pass through Silbury hill again and the West Kennet long barrow; the other to pass down a new Avenue of stones so the two lines could node again at a place we know today as the Sanctuary.

The question I would put to you though is 'Why might this third phase of movement have taken place?'

Was it to have two more nodes? You may know that the nodes at Oliver's castle and at Ogbourne St Andrew are not that far away and certainly no more than a day's walk.

Are we possibly looking back at time when thousands and thousands of people gathered on many nodes in the region at the same time?

Is what drew them to perhaps do this, the same thing that seems to be driving us to do something similar again today?

We may find out sooner than we think.

Media section

The recommended video in this newsletter will provide a much greater understanding for some parts of the science section written about earlier.

It is only 17 min long and it contains some stunningly beautiful images taken from the new James Webb Space telescope.

The video only came out a few weeks ago and it is a 'must see' if you want to understand our universe in a better way.

One of the earliest thinkers in regards to the Electric Universe theory was Wallace Thornhill. He is currently the Chief Science Advisor for the Thunderbolts project.

This project is an organization of scientists, historians, and researchers who work on a wide range of issues related to the Electric Universe.

One of the things that you would expect to see in an Electric universe is evidence of positive and negative filaments stretching long distances across space in an interconnected way.

The positive and negative pairs would appear twisted about each other like braids of hair.

Back in September 2021, before the new James Web Space Telescope (JWST) was launched, Wal Thornhill made several predictions about what its greater magnification, and its infrared detection, would find.

He stated:-

"I predict that the JWST with its vast improvement in sensitivity and resolution, will reveal the existence of the connecting network of helically twisted filamentary pairs and braids even more clearly.

We will discover helically twisted filament pairs and braids everywhere we look."

He was proved 100% correct.

His prediction was spectacularly confirmed in the first JWST 'Deep Field' science images on July 12, 2022, by evidence of helically twisted filaments and braids of the kind provided by the JWST of the 'Cosmic cliffs' in the Carina Nebula and Stephan's Quintet.

It is proof positive of electric currents flowing in space at the macro scale.

The title is 'Twisted Pairs & Braids Everywhere' (17mins)

Book section

Return of the Children of Light – Incan and Mayan prophecies for a new World by Judith Bluestone Polich

This book was originally published back in 1999. I read it about 12 years ago and read it again last year.

I mention that because of several things I found.

Firstly, I remembered so little of the contents of the book when I picked it up to read it again. It is actually shocking how much we have read that we have since forgotten. So much that something really needs to be done about this going forward.

Secondly, my own journey since reading the book the first time has continued. I have read more things, had more experiences and listened to some amazing people. In short, I was now far better prepared to get so much more out of reading this book a second time. My understanding leapt and so did my appreciation for the author and their work and the message for us all.

These experiences shocked me because it made finding the right books to read was all the more important. It takes time to read a book and twice the time to read it again and none of us have time to read lots of books twice. But reading them twice does make so much sense because of how we change in between the times we read them.

What this means is that we really need to choose what books to read far more carefully. I cannot tell you what is the right decision-making strategy for you when it comes to which book to read, but I am now totally hooked on relying on synchronicity.

Only when I get two acasually connected events within a short time span – ones that lead to a particular book to read, will I set out to read that book.

Even that though is not necessarily enough. The synchronicity obviously raises its importance and significance so I make notes in the margins and then I type out these notes. All of this helps reinforce the key messages that book is giving.

That too, though is not enough when it comes to a really important book. For that, you really need to discuss the book with other people who have read it.

There may be many reasons why you should read this book. Two possible ones are because it writes about the Return of the children of light and also Stepping into the Angel light – both of which should ring bells based on the science section in this newsletter.

If you are wanting to share discussions about some of the content in this, we cover the prophecies it mentions in the discussion modules that are being tested at the moment.

Anyway, if you are called to buy it and read it, here is one link that can tell you more.

Knowlton Henge group meditation – further information

The message from the organisers (Adrian and Joe) is that this is a free event but it is essential to book parking asap (as parking is limited) at New Barn Farm for £5 per car. There is an option to pre book a meal there also. (The car parking charge is partly so the farm can hire extra toilets for the event)

Book on this link -

https://newbarnfarmdorset.co.uk/knowlton-church-and-earthworks/?fbclid=IwAR0JNQZf3RAVHfCzYGnw91Mvx2oNYjvK\_icVmKfQaCgl4R1FWeCnpP5\_1cBc

The gates to the farm parking area will be open at 10am. Please arrive by 11.15am latest.

There is room for 200 cars and already over 200 people have expressed an interest in coming along.

Three fifteen-minute meditations will take place.

The first meditation is done in silence as we all tune into the energy of the place in an attentive way and ask the highest source open to us to share anything that we may need to know about or do.

In the second meditation people may be drawn into sounding the vowels or humming at an intuitive level. Tibetan healing bowls will be played and you will be invited to explore your own voices. The aim here is for greater resonance between everyone through the feeling of Divine love emanating outwards from our hearts to everyone and from having come in from Source. Any other intent here will be guided by any guidance that is received from the first meditation.

The third meditation and prayer is done on a more personal level with the aim of sending love & healing out to those people we know who need it. It can also be a time for self-healing, guidance and asking for synchronicity to help us explore more about what we should be doing in our own lives.

October hallows

My next newsletter aims to come out on the 1st November – please forgive me though if there is some slippage on this as I am entering an even busier time of my life.

This date though feels a whole World away at the moment as we have two months ahead of us that do not bode well for mankind and this seems to also be signposted by several astrological features.

I know Pam Gregory has much more to say about this and why it is happening (Do watch her podcasts for more information – they will be essential viewing).

I know too that managing our expectations is a good way for preparing to be in the right emotional state for what is to come - if not for ourselves, for those around us.

I have therefore decided to add some thoughts on some of the macro scale events under the following headings with some suggestions at the end.

What is connected to these events is the increasing intensity of the cosmic energies we are receiving. These waves are getting stronger and they are affecting everyone to a greater or lesser extent.

We fight these increasing waves of energy though at our peril. We can only surrender to going with the flow.

This means being more flexible and less stubborn in our thinking and our actions.

Allow ourselves to be changed from who we are as we begin to feel greater empathy, telepathy and clairvoyance.

If we plan ahead to far, we must accept that we may need to be even more flexible. Everyone's plans are being disturbed and this will continue more and more.

We must try to see people in terms of how they are coping with these increases in energy. Many are suffering inside and becoming more and more stressed. This is an inflammatory situation if we don't see this and step back at times and forward to help at other times.

It is these increasing energies that I think are behind the adversity we are seeing in this World right now. Even the 'would be World rulers', in their own stubbornness, are becoming more and more stressed as they see their goal slipping away.

For this reason it is good to take a step back and have a look at reality - as best we can - before we make decisions – just like a surfer would do when about to ride the wave of their life. Their own timing for when to paddle hard with their arms to catch the wave is everything in order to them go with the flow with the support of full power of the wave.

What is going on in the World?

We each live in a tiny bubble. This small bubble is the only 'actual' view of the World that we can see, feel and hear around us. In this bubble we make our primary observations.

What we think we know is going on comes mainly from other people – some of these people we can trust because we know them – the observations from these trusted sources make up our secondary observations.

Everything else comes to us from third parties and from parties even further away from our direct experience. This 'tertiary' information is, these days, likely to be very distant from the actual truth and just listening to this 'tertiary' news makes it very difficult to determine what is really going on.

Lies and secrecy are commonplace amongst those who would wish to take full control over our lives.

Navigating our way around the lies requires more primary and secondary observations and also for us to become more heart centred as this is where we will feel the truth.

One truth now is that many people around the World are suffering.

The real sadness is that this is all intentional and could be avoided.

What exists amongst us in the World right now are two types of capitalism – Corporate capitalism and Entrepreneurial capitalism. They are both forms of capitalism but what is different about the people who belong to each group is an emotion and it is this emotion that leads to different ways of thinking.

One is driven by greed, profit & power over everything around it – including nature. This is actually a fear based form of capitalism where the fear of failure drives people to needing higher and higher ego's to suppress their inner fears. This fear drives these people to take less and less risk with their money and to look at all ways possible to safeguard their capital. They want nothing to stand in their way and they will even stoop to mass murder to this end. Think here of civilian casualties in a war when it comes to mass murder as war becomes their end game as that leads to even more wealth extraction from other parties. These people will stoop to win/lose opportunities in their pursuit of short term gain.

Their only threat actually comes from the Entrepreneurs in the World. Something new and better can devastate their existing businesses and they know that one of their own main flaws is their lack of creativity. To be creative you need to think freely and that is why these people hate freedom as it becomes a breeding ground for their downfall.

The people who take this route become lazier and lazier and more and more parasitical.

In other route of the entrepreneurial capitalist we find people prepared to take risks with their money. They actually look to create something that will help other people in their life such that those people will be prepared to buy what is being offered to them. They know they will have to employ people and pay them well to get work done well such that their customers are happy. They recognise that a safe World needs trade and trust between countries and they understand the need for win/win contracts over the medium to long term.

These people are creative by nature and they know the need for freedom because the World changes and it always faces new adversities and these problems can only ever be overcome by creative thinking. They value the truth because without that reality, what they invest in to solve a problem will be wasted if they are wrong.

Their only threat comes from the Corporate capitalists as they are the predators who are hungry for more. These parasitical predators seek out the entrepreneurial threats and use all sorts of diabolical ways to wrest the businesses away from their creative counterparts.

The World is shaped by the battles between these types of capitalists. Many names are used to disguise who they are – Marxists, Socialists etc are all labels used to confuse others in what is all just a geopolitical game for the parasites as their goal is to own and control the World and the tool they use the most is division.

These two types of capitalism are not two categories though. There is a sliding scale between them and this is all based on the amount of fear held by the owners/shareholders of their businesses. Some people may well start off as entrepreneurial but they then become more filled with fear and slide into becoming a parasitical corporate capitalist.

Divide to rule is an understood maxim of theirs which is why we find political parties created to look like two different sides but they both always doing the same bidding of the parasitical classes. We are constantly being presented with the only choice of one party or another for good reason – they don't want any other option to emerge.

The truth is we don't have to play their game – there is another way.

The trouble for the rest of us is that when they don't get what they want, they double down on their goals and resort to even greater degrees of chaos and this is where we are now.

The deliberate collapse of World economy

Many things in the world come under the banner of the World economy but there are only two things that really count – Energy and Gold.

If you have control over the energy and you own the most gold, you are in a better position to control the World.

One of the past parasites once said 'Gold is money, everything else is credit' and he was right because he knew the true power of owning physical gold.

Oil and Gas is now the other key to owning the World. In the past the USA and Saudi Arabia established a sort of monopoly over energy trade and, with the help of Henry Kissinger, all oil and gas energy had to be bought and sold using US dollars.

This gave the US an unassailable position and a new unipolar World emerged. These things though do not last the test of time and, as the oil and gas began to run out, others fields were found elsewhere in the World and now Russia, Iran & Qatar have by far the greatest amount of gas reserves.

A new BRICS+ group of nations are now forming and their oil gas and gold reserves are what is driving the World into a Multipolar World.

A new commodity based payment system between these countries has been initiated and it allows them to use their own currencies to buy and sell gold and energy. These countries are now relying less and less on using the US dollar for energy payments.

The West's fiat based currency system has no chance of competing with this gold, oil and gas backed exchange system.

China's and Russia's Hypersonic missiles can evade any missile defence system that the rest of the World has to offer and this has shifted the balance of power and it is unlikely that the West will reach parity in this game for at least another couple of years.

Like Putin and the Russians, or not, the sanctions placed on them (for their 'Special military operation' in Ukraine to 'De-Nazify' the Donbass region) have clearly failed as the Russian Ruble has soared in strength against all other currencies in the World and the West are being crippled by energy shortages and a roaring inflation running on average now at around 15%. (No one listens to the headline figures any more – we all know about shrinkflation and constant omissions of more and more of the daily necessities in these figures)

What is really going on here though is the deliberate demise of the Western economy and the suppression of its people so they accept whatever is then presented to them.

This mess is all easily reversible but the governments and their paymasters and the parasitical idealists are not interested in doing this.

Total collapse is their agenda and we need to wake up and realise this fast.

How we react now is all important

If we stoop to negative emotions like anger, they win.

If we march in protest, they win.

If we resort to violence they win.

We cannot change their system. It is not designed to be able to be changed by anyone but themselves.

This may seem like quite a gloomy picture, but the truth is things are not going the way the parasitical psychopaths (P.P's) would like.

I mentioned earlier that the emerging multipolar World has two different methods of financial exchange occurring.

On the old side there is fiat money – unsound paper money which has been printed with nothing to support the value of this money other than the faith of the people using the currency and perhaps the threat of war if we don't.

On the new side there is commodity based finance – sound money backed by amongst other things Gold.

Gold has been the antithesis of fiat money ever since President Nixon took the US dollar off of the gold standard in 1971. The price of gold has been artificially manipulated ever since and this is done in something called the 'paper' gold market.

Physically transferring and storing large amounts of gold is a costly thing so the paper market was introduced and this market is heavily traded with options and derivatives. (Essentially options and derivatives are like bets in a casino where the really big bets tend to sway the market direction of the price)

So if you are concerned about the strength of your own countries fiat money, you need to massively suppress the price of Gold and this is done by 'Shorting' the paper market. 'Shorting' is like placing a massive bet that the price of gold is going to go lower.

Anyone thinking the gold price might rise was for a long time on the wrong side of a trade with an opponent who was far, far wealthier than you and they could print their own paper money.

Over the years the central banks (and the central bank for all the central banks the Bank of International Settlements (BIS) in Basel Switzerland) have taken out bigger and bigger 'short' positions (bets) in order to suppress the price of Gold.

This is not only going on in the Gold market though. This methodology is used to influence the price of all commodities.

The problem is that this all comes at a price. Over time more and more people take an alternative view from the Western banks and their central banks - who have now become more and more exposed in their 'short' positions.

Their total level of derivative debt now is over 700 Trillion dollars.

This titanic amount can never be repaid so if the bet goes against these banks, there is no way their current assets will ever pay off their 'short' positions.

(This is when a poker player at a poker table has to get up and leave because they have lost all their money and of course their backers (customers) money).

This is the good news

If there is war, the price of Gold would rocket upwards – especially when the stronger side owns the most gold.

Between the BRICS+ nations there is probably around 40,000 tons of Gold and they have no derivative debt.

On the other Western side there is probably only 20,000 tons of Gold, no hypersonic weapons and huge levels of derivative debt,

The good news for us is that Western countries (USA, Europe, Canada, UK, Australia & New Zealand) cannot afford to go to war as war would totally collapse the whole Western financial system and the Central banks absolutely have to avoid that as their aim is to introduce a Central Bank Digital currencies (CBDC's).

This is the good news. We are not going to see a World War for at least 18 months to 2 years and that buys us some time.

There is one more dilemma the P.P's have. They are not united amongst themselves at all.

There are actually many divisions as you might expect within a group of egocentric people who all want to be leaders.

The European, American and the British leaders are really more divided than they would like us to think. (Apologies to the people of Canada, Australia and New Zealand here but at the moment but your leaders just seem to just follow one or two of the other three countries when it comes to policy)

With all this debt, they know there is a good chance that one of the four main currencies will fail (Yen, Euro, Pound, Dollar) and they would rather see the failure of the other currencies than their own. When all the chips are down, one is going to fail and we are fast approaching this. The yen and the euro are being heavily shorted (yes they even take bets on it all).

The Central Bankers all seem to have now decided to allow inflation to reduce away their massive exposure to their derivative debt (If it costs one million dollars for a loaf of bread (Zimbabwe) then a $700 trillion debt is nothing to be worried about – the people be damned. (They have done this before and these PP's are in a corner and so they will do it again))

The global corporations have all their money tied up in their own shares (having borrowed huge amounts at no interest to do so) and in property. Their share price is their concern so a 60- 70% fall in the stock market is not something they want to see. Another thing they do not want to see is an increase in interest rates.

They don't mind inflation as long as it increases their share price. Their problem though is if people stop buying what they are selling and start sharing items for normal use, growing their own food and using natural alternatives for healthcare. (They need full control over us to stop this from happening which is why they had to decimate small to medium size businesses. Big fish eat middle sized fish and little fish)

They need inflation but not the growing opposition from the people that it brings – especially if they have automatic rifles. They need to be competitive in global trade but not at the expense of not being able to print as much money as they would like.

They do, and have, settled on a solution but they know it will take time to implement and time is something they now realise they have very little of.

People are waking up and realising what is going on. The lies that the mainstream media mouthpiece is putting out, by the hour, is not being believed by more and more people.

The P.P's also know pretty accurately how many people are awakening and it is really worrying them.

Not knowing these figures is our weakness, we don't have access to the data information from all forms of social media so we are just not aware of the growing percentage of the population who are awakening.

If we did know, the game would be over already.

The other part of their game is that they absolutely need to introduce their digital currencies and for two reasons only – negative interest rates and universal basic income.

These two things force people not to save but to spend and to become helplessly dependent upon the state. Bankers can then have both the inflation they need and they can also control consumer spending to avoid a depression.

It is a good plan but for one problem, it does not help the entrepreneur who wishes to improve their life and the lives of those around them. It will decimate the middle classes.

Most of the employment in the World comes from the small to medium sized businesses so many people will become unemployed when they fail (This has already started – the disastrous shutdown policy has initiated this).

When you sit back and look at this whole situation you can begin to see how the conflict and dilemma, that most of us find ourselves in, is between those with money and power and those without.

This though is the wrong conclusion

There is something far bigger afoot here,

Yes it does seem like we are in a war but we must really ask what kind of war it is?

What we need to recognise here is what the true conflict is actually all about.

When we come to realise the answer here, we can more clearly see the actions we must take.

The first realisation is that it is not an 'us' against 'them' war at all.

It is however a conflict but the conflict actually only exists within us all.

The parasitical class are filled with fear – its why they do what they do. If we raise our own vibrations so we have no fear, that will actually help bring down levels of fear in others.

It is through our choices that we make, at this moment in time, that we either move on to one path or another.

When it comes down to 'our choices' and 'our path', we are forced to recognise that it is all about our own consciousness and our growth,

When we now realise that the events that we are experiencing now on Earth, both energetically and geopolitically, we can only come to one conclusion – it is all about our own spirituality and this is fully dependent on being present & holding a positive loving vibration.

The evolution of our consciousness is our own choice but, in just recognising this, we have to also realise that, to achieve this evolution, we have to help others come to realise that they too must make the same choice.

To evolve, or not to evolve?

This is the only question.

All this negativity, all these difficulties, are being presented to us right now to help us make this choice and to help others become informed enough to also make their choice.

We can grow local communities who can begin to think and act in the necessary ways and I know several areas where people are already doing this.

In these communities we can spread an alternative way of thinking and help people seek the truth. We can also help those in need in these communities.

Mass meditation events will raise awareness of the new ways.

Imagine thousands of people meditating on nodes in large parks in cities all around the World.

We must not seek to change the system in our country by direct means, we must seek to change ourselves and how we connect with each other.

By doing this we will change the World because this sort of peaceful activity will become more and more noticeable.

A simple message is all that is needed and it is one that more and more groups are adopting.

'We do not accept what you say and we do not accept what you want us to do.

There is a better way.'

Sacred network update

Progress is being made but at a pace which has slowed. There are reasons for this and one is the amount of time I have had to spend on other things. This means I am behind in my work in putting up the sacred sites on the World map.

Unfortunately each site takes a while to do as the coordinates must be decimalised. This is being done though and it is hoped that the founding members will have initial access later on in September,

We have also had a rethink on the visual impact we wanted to achieve with the front page. The reason is that we started to receive head winds from people we were looking to engage in the project and when that happens, the universe is really telling you that your direction is wrong.

I will be emailing the founding members about these things soon as their creative input seems to now be more appropriate.

My apologies here that this has become yet another long missive. I had really set out to do a shorter version but right down to the last day, I have been getting contributions in different ways that just seemed right to add. For example to Prophecy of the different colours of the Sun went through several revisions as though key information was pushing to get through.

I wish you all the most positive times over the coming months and I look forward to joining you in group meditations all around the World in the coming harmony time.

With gratitude

Rory Duff
