

December 2019 Newsletter

Thank you all for your continued interest in my research. This newsletter continues in the same theme as the last with updates in the variety of areas that I have listed below.

1. Earth Energy news

In November, I had the good fortune to be invited over the Florida and then Paterson New Jersey to give a couple of talks and to teach some dowsing. The photo above shows some of the lovely people I met up near Palm coast, Florida learning to dowse.

As is the case, I always do some remote dowsing to find out where the lines will be before I go somewhere to teach. A quick check when I get to the location provides some feedback to the accuracy of the work. When I do this, I like to start with the type 4 lines in the area and then work from them towards the area I will be based in.

With Florida, I found two pairs of type 4 lines. One pair exits the state to the Atlantic side just below Palm coast. I knew that when I was going to give everyone this information, I was going to be asked where these lines went. If you read my last newsletter, you will remember how much of a task that turned out to be. I will get to that information in a moment but I wanted to share with you another little piece of synchronicity first.

I had been invited over by the lovely L. Shannon Anderson, a beautiful writer and researcher into a variety of mysteries of the divine feminine and the Magdalene Awakening that is going on. For more details on her and her work, please go to <http://www.themagdaleneawakening.com/>

I have to add that I have also just been reading her book Parallel Universes: A love story transcending death and could not put it down. It is a wonderful story of a great love and grief.

Shannon had just taken my wife and I to visit the local beach and were heading back. However we sat at a junction – just feeling whether to go left or right or straight on to go back to her house. We intuitively chose left and that made Shannon think of taking me to see a place the locals called the Domes.

At this point I should tell you that left at the junction to me meant that I could check precisely where the type 4 lines crossed out into the Atlantic as we followed the coastal road South. (It would also give me the feedback to my remote dowsing as I was being driven without a map so any response I got could be easily checked against my earlier work).

The Domes however it was not the place it used to be as one of them had been taken down and the energies there were not that strong. I had half suspected whether one of the type 4 lines was going to pass through the place, but it didn't.

It was then that Shannon got the idea to take us round the corner, less than a mile away, to Phyllis Schlemmer's old house.

For those of you who are unaware of Phyllis's work, when she was on our Physical World, she was known for channelling a group of people called the Council of 9. These were said to be a "a circle of universal beings living outside time and space."

Phyllis became very well known for her work and many members of the US government followed her reports. The CIA also knew of her work and she was even visited by Gene Roddenberry – the creator of the Star Trek franchise.

Shannon had known Phyllis and had visited her several times. What was of interest to me though was that earlier in the year, I had met a chap called Julian who was interested in my dowsing work. During our meeting he happened to ask if I knew about Phyllis Schlemmer. At the time, I did not. He mentioned it because he was one of the trustees of her estate and he had all of her unpublished materials. He also asked whether I knew anyone who might be interested in compiling them into something coherent. It was not on my radar back then, but now, with Shannon's words, it got my attention. This was especially the case when my dowsing rod flicked across my chest, just before the turning down the lane to Phyllis's house.

It appeared that centre of the type 4 line (A St. Michael & St. Mary type line) ran right through the smaller one of her houses.

So. What should I now make of this little synchronicity? It is sometimes too early to tell with these things. Sometimes we are shown synchronicity just to let us know we are following the right path, but there is often something deeper to it all. In these moments that give us a heads up to explore more or to watch out for more incoming information from a similar direction. I will wait and see on this and report back in a future newsletter.

This is perhaps where I should turn to look at where this pair of lines was heading.

With some care, I can reveal that this pair of lines matches the same pair that run through Braganca and Tortosa in Spain – Two very special places where the former has evidence of humans living there over 12000 years ago and the latter being known as one area the Knights Templar spent some considerable time. Not perhaps two places that you may have been aware of, but still places where people lived who had more than a passing interest in these energies. Both the stone age people and the Templars are known to have built more well-known monuments on sacred sites where the energy lines ran through.

2. Science News

This news section is possibly going to be seen as controversial by some. I am only interested in the truth though. The reason I am writing about this is because of my research into the 'Evolution of consciousness' and my Geobiological research into the source energy that is driving the appearance of the Type 5 Emperor Dragons. This is all about the effect of increasing amounts of cosmic energy we are now receiving into our atmosphere due to our reducing magnetic fields and the increasing intensity of cosmic energy coming from Active Galactic Nucleii. The implication of this is that it will have an effect on us physically and mentally. It also though, will have an effect on our climate.

Firstly, I have to say that I am fully against pollution. We have to stop that, not for the Earth's sake, but for humanity's sake and our health. The Earth will be fine long after humans have gone.

The next part is split into two sections to give you some understanding of how I see things.

If you recall your early Maths lessons you will remember in Algebra that you can only solve an equation if there is only one variable eg. With $2 + a = 5$ we can tell here that $a=3$.

However if you have two variables it becomes much harder. For example $a + b = 10$. With two unknown variables and we cannot find out what a and b equal. They could $a=1$ & $b=9$, or $a=4$ & $b=6$.

When you have lots of variables in an equation or puzzle, it gets far more complex and this is when you have to make some starting assumptions. For example if you have some evidence in the above equation that $b=6$, you can then test if $a=4$.

Standardising variables in order to try and learn more about the other variables is one way to try and begin to understand and model a complex picture – and climate is complex as there are many factors that come into play that affect our weather.

In 1980 the World Climate Research Program was started. It was set up to determine the predictability of climate and to determine the effect of human activities on climate. It began testing models to see how the World's Climate was being affected and by what. They introduced something called the Climate Model Intercomparison Project. (CIMP) This first one, CIMP1, was a set of Ocean and Atmosphere Model outputs. It was sent out around the World to hundreds of Climate scientists to do research on with their own sets of data. At that time Total Solar Invariance was set at a standard amount. This meant they were assuming that the energy from the Sun was a constant over time. This was rather like choosing $b = 6$ in our initial equation that had two variables. By choosing to keep it a standard & invariable figure, it now meant that the researchers could concentrate on testing the other variables. CIMP1 results then led to changes and CIMP2 models were sent out to researchers to test and check. In these early models, the results all showed that humans were having an effect on the Earth's climate. The question though was how much of an effect and what did it all mean.

In 1988 the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) was established by the World Meteorological Organization (WMO) and the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP). The IPCC was set up to assess climate change based on the latest science.

As the researchers learnt more about the effect of the variables they were entering into their models, the CIMP models became more refined. CIMP 5 still definitely showed that humans had an effect on the climate but it was less of an effect than shown before with the earlier models.

It was now time to test the initial assumption of Total Solar Irradiance. This is like the $b=6$ that was mentioned earlier (where scientists purposely chose to keep this variable a standard figure in order to learn about the other variables).

The Climate Scientists at the IPCC always knew that they would have to come back to this in later models and test their assumption and they always knew it might affect the final picture and the final result. They had to however start somewhere in the beginning in order to learn more about our complex weather patterns and what affected them.

So the latest model that has just been sent out to be researched is CIMP 6. This now, for the first time, includes looking at the effect of the varying energy from the Solar wind on our climate. In particular the model is looking to answer the question - How does the Earth system respond to forcing? – Solar Forcing.

It takes about 3 years for the reports to all come back and for a final report to be produced but already climate scientists are finding that the Solar wind is having a much larger effect on our climate than the figure they had been using as a standard for Total Solar Irradiance. This meant that the effect on the climate by mankind is going to be much less than previous models showed.

If the figures are right so far, this could show that mankind has less than 1% effect on the weather and the rest will be down to other factors. We shall find the final report on CIMP6 in 2022.

This, though, will not be the full and final picture. There will be another model after that and this one will include all 'particle forcing' from Space and not just from the Solar wind. This will almost certainly show that mankind has an even smaller effect on the climate. We don't know if they will include total particle forcing in CIMP7 or a later version but when they do, it is extremely likely that this will end the conversation on the effect mankind is having on our climate.

Unfortunately, mankind still has a 100% effect on pollution and this needs to stop. It is just that our increased pollution does not seem to be affecting the World's natural climate patterns.

It is the part about 'total particle forcing' that is of interest to me as this will include cosmic energy from Space. We know much more cosmic energy is getting through now and we are beginning to see the effect it is having mentally and emotionally on humans.

What I unfortunately have to also add is to this is the physical effect on our World and this comes from the research done by a man called Henrik Svensmark.

Svensmark is a physicist and professor in the Division of Solar System Physics at the Danish National Space Institute in Copenhagen. He is known for his theory on the effects of cosmic rays on cloud formation as an indirect cause of global warming.

What Professor Svensmark has shown is that an increase of Cosmic energy leads to an increase in clouds and this leads to more light from the Sun being reflected off the top of the clouds back into Space. It is called the Albedo effect and it has the effect of cooling the Earth. (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wU1qg8HceGI>)

So if we have more cosmic energy coming into our atmosphere, it is going to make the Earth colder. If we now consider that the Earth has been in an interglacial period for much longer than normal, if we look back at historical times of when we had ice ages and mini ice ages, we have to ask when our current warm period might be ending.

For the answer to this, we should perhaps look at the effect our Sun has on these long term cycles of warming and cooling. When there is lots of sun spot activity on the Sun, it is called a Solar Maximum. When there is little sun spot activity it is a solar minimum. Sunspot cycle video <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=CqIxYyXHCvs>

In the past the solar minimums have corresponded to ice ages and mini ice ages. The Maunder minimum was one of these periods (1645-1715). These times of maximum and minimum sun spot activity go in cycles and these cycles also have extreme moments. These are called Grand Solar Maximum and Grand Solar Minimum.

It appears that we are about to enter a Solar Minimum, and possibly, in around 22-23 years time, we may enter a Grand Solar minimum. (These are 11 year solar cycles). We are in cycle 24 at the moment and this is due to end sometime in the next 12 months.

With the increase in cloud cover from the cosmic energy and the solar minimum, we could be looking at a mini Ice Age in the year 2040 and much colder weather leading up to that.

For more on the Grand Solar Minimum try this link

<https://watchers.news/2019/07/01/valentina-zharkova-on-the-upcoming-grand-solar-minimum/>

It outlines research on this subject by Valentina Zharkova – a Professor in Applied Mathematics, Astronomy & Astrophysics at Northumbria University.

You might now be wondering why this is not information that is readily available in the mainstream news. Well I am sorry to have to say that looking in the mainstream news these days is a complete waste of time. They only tell you what they want to program you with and the newspapers are controlled by a few people who are only interested in power and money and not the truth at all.

3. Social media news

One of the things people cannot see about a Facebook page is the Insights – unless you are the administrator of the page. This tells you how many people read your posts and the shares it gets. What has fascinated me with my social media work is why some posts do so much better than other ones.

Is it because they just capture a moment in time when more people seem interested in a subject or are they just sometimes shared by one or two people who have loads of followers?

So with that question in mind, I would like to re-post the most popular recent post by far from my Leyline Science facebook page. Five times more people viewed this post than others in the last three months. Perhaps it had something to do with the image of a large snake. I would though, prefer to think that it was because of its content and that it was one of my most important posts as it tells us of the times we are in and what we face.

I will repeat the post in this newsletter for you.

Post 188. Why is it that so many cultures around the World have had a fascination with giant serpents? Their symbolism is truly universal and yet there has been nothing living ever, big enough to encircle the World. This is an artist's impression of Jörmungandr - the Midgard Serpent that is said to be big enough wind itself right around World. It comes from the Norse story of Ragnarok as told in the Poetic Edda – a collection of 13th century poems.

Ragnarok tells of a time, maybe in our past or in our future, when 'Beings' from several different Worlds all came to battle in our physical World called Midgard. The Giants in the story, called the Jotnar, came from the World called Jötunheimr – one of nine Worlds. There were Frost giants, Fire giants and Mountain giants – sometimes called Trolls. The Old Gods – the Vanir came from the World called Vanaheim. They used sorcery and magic to fight with.

The new Gods, the Aesir, came from the World called Asgard where the gates to Valhalla could be found. The light Elves and the dark Elves lived in Alfheim. The Dwarves lived in Svartalfheim. Other Worlds included Helheim – also called Hel and Niflheim and Muspelheim that were primordial Worlds of Ice & Mist and Fire. The nine Worlds are all bound together by the tree of life called Yggdrasil.

If you are thinking of the similarity of the tree of life and the Kabbalah and the Chaldean tree of life you would be on the right tracks. You have now reached the same truth that many have tried to withhold from us for centuries. These inner Worlds all actually exist on different matter frequency systems within the same area of space (Space as in the area around us, not outer space). They can be reached on journeys made 'within' during deep meditation. Incubation, Shamanic journeying are all ways to visit, to explore and to learn more about ourselves and the true nature of reality.

Even great psychologists like Carl Jung 'travelled within' his mind to these Worlds. He kept a secret diary, called his Red book, that documented what he came across. This was not published in his lifetime for good reason, its truths would have meant the powerful few that dominate religion, science and politics would have had to assassinate his character just to bring back under control those who had sought to set themselves free.

So although the tale of Ragnarok is just a story, it is based on the true nature of reality. The Giant Serpents, the World Snakes, the Ouroboros – the Snake that holds its tale in its mouth are all symbolic of the World's most powerful Emperor Dragons - the type 5 Energy lines and they have now returned to the World after an absence of several centuries. They are back because the cosmic waves of galactic energy are now increasing again and our three magnetic shields are down. (For more on this you need to read my book Grail Bound).

Folks, this is a game changer for life on this planet. Forget all the wars, trumped up terrorism, climate change, brexit etc, this is about our consciousness and its evolution and it can explain why so many are experiencing mental ill health right now for reasons they just don't understand. People who seemingly have everything they need in life are being affected by this in just the same way as people who have next to nothing.

These waves of energy are building in intensity and are now coming closer and closer together. We need to learn to ride them and that means becoming really, really positive in our thinking and having a full and deep appreciation for what is happening. The veils between the Worlds are coming down. Even now some people with heightened levels of sensitivity are already seeing these 'Beings' from these other Worlds. Just seeing a few of these is enough to send normally quite sane people fully mad. This is so serious a subject I will return to this again in future posts.

So what do you think? Is it important enough to go to that social media post and to share it to others? If you do, thank you for helping to promote my work

4. Courses, Seminars, Workshops news

My dowsing courses for 2019 have now finished. It was a really successful end to the year with a further 18 people learning to dowse on my trip over to the US.

I have been in awe at the time and distance people in the UK have travelled to come to learn to dowse in the City of Bath in the UK. Some have travelled the length of the UK to get there and I really do appreciate that. The record has to go to a lovely lady called Laura who travelled 8 hours by car to get to my course in Paterson, New Jersey. That she lives not far from a small village in Pennsylvania called Energy amused me too. So thank you Laura for coming along and doing so well too.

Having looked back at the numbers for this year, 73 people successfully went through the level 1 awareness and dowsing course. I put together the competency based courses at the end of last year so it was the first full year of teaching them. This is the first ever competency based training course in dowsing, I suspect, to be found anywhere in the World. I have done a quick check around but not found any other courses. The thing about a competency based course is that it can highlight where someone is finding difficulties and what they need to practice on. The level 1 course has 15 competencies and the level 2 a further 10 – all of these are necessary aspects to learn to dowse for earth energies successfully.

9 people also completed the level 2 course and 2 people have started the level 3 course.

Running competency based courses, as opposed to just normal learning to dowse courses, has taught me so much more about how people learn to dowse and the difficulties they encounter.

One of the things I found interesting this year that I would like to share with you was the difficulty of attaining the states of focus and awareness. Those people who found it was easy to get into a state of awareness were finding it easy to pick up all sorts of energies. Their difficulty though was to isolate out what they were looking for. What they found difficult was to focus on this. On the other hand, those who found it easy to focus and be precise with their questioning, found it harder to get into an aware state to then pick up the specific frequency of energy they were looking for.

This may sound easy to do to those of you who have not done the course, however I would add that, it is the constant switching between focus and awareness that is the difficulty. You need to reach from the intensity of one state to the intensity of other state and this is tiring and it takes time to do well and it needs practice. In addition to that, we are working on learning to differentiate between several different types of energy lines and this adds to the challenge.

If you can do this well though, it opens up all sorts of opportunities. If this is of interest, do come along to my courses next year. The dates will be up on my website before the end of December.

Also up soon will be details on the opportunity to join me in South East Spain. We will be visiting some of the sites mentioned in my book Grail Found. This will include a trip to the 1st Order node, the Bronze Age city of La Bas Tida and a visit to Caravaca de la Cruz to see the Apparition/Templar window.

There will also be dowsing and seminars you can attend. The two trips will be back to back in July. Final dates are being arranged around location access and permissions and will be sorted shortly. The numbers will be limited to 8 for each trip so you will need to pay deposits early.

Keep an eye on the website for this.

Dates for the other Seminars and new ones will also be up on my website before the end of the year.

5. Book news

I have just been looking back over the year to see which of my books have been the most popular purchases. The number one both in the US and the UK this year has been Grail Found. I am very grateful to the constant stream of good feedback I get from people who have read this book and the numbers who tell me they have read it twice who find even more value from it the second time around. Thank you.

The second place book in the US has been the guide to the Classification of Leylines, Earth Energies and Nodes, whilst in the UK it has been Grail Bound. Coming up fast though is my novel The Grail Hunter but that has only been out for a few weeks.

Thanks to everyone who buys them, it really helps me continue to do my research. There is so much work to still do, so please recommend the books where you can.

6. Extra

One of the things that has worked quite well recently is running dowsing courses for groups of people who live some distance away from me. Instead of coming to the City of Bath, I have remotely dowsed the area where the group lives and gone to them for a day or longer. It is actually just a bit of extra work as I have to check my remote dowsing in the morning in situ. This means quickly going around the area seeing exactly where the lines are so that I know where to take the group first and then next to ensure a sensible and achievable learning progression is being followed.

The reason for mentioning this is that you may be part of a group of people who would like to learn how to dowse who live some distance away from where I live near Bath. This does not just have to be in the UK. I have done this for a few groups in the UK but also internationally in Belgium, Florida & New Jersey in the last 12 months and I have work booked in California in February 2020 already. It is unfortunately fully booked now as it was privately arranged tuition.

I will be in Spain in July and back in the US again in October 2020 so if you are part of a group of people who would like to learn to dowse and to learn more about my work on the evolution of consciousness or Synchronicity and the Grail at one of my Seminar /Workshops, please let me know and we will see if something can be arranged.

So this is my last newsletter for 2019. Have a great Xmas and New Year and I hope to see some of you next year.
